Negative Electricity

My sister Maggie is a very fortunate girl.

Yes? Why?

Dunno. But she went to a party last night and played blind man's buff all the evening. The gentlemen hunt round and find a girl, and then they must either kiss her or give her a shilling.

Yes?

Maggie came home with thirty shillings and a war bond.

Going Strong

The Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal is having the best year in its history. Their subscriptions for the month of November exceeded by almost 200 per cent. the same month of any previous year. December will also be a record breaker. The Family Herald Publishers are perfecting plans for elaborate improvements. The public should not confuse that great weekly with a small daily paper of similar name now in liquidation. There is no fear of such a thing happening with the Family Herald. The word "Family" should not be obmitted in the address of that paper. We are informed that their offer of a War Album free to all who subscribe still remains good, but the demand is so great that it may have to be withdrawn soon. The Family Herald is big value and the Album is most attractive, so it is no wonder they are securing thousands of new subscribers.

The far famed Rexall hair tonic can now be obtained at Goodeve's. If you want a really good hair tonic, procure at once.

Mrs. G. B. Garrett left Grand Forks last Thursday for Maple Creek, Sask., having been called there through the serious illness of her mother.

Geo. Boag was in town for a few days from Lightning Peak. Geo. states that there is four feet of snow at the camp, and that he made the trip out to Edgewood on skis.

Just received a shipment of "Bobbie Burns" plum puddings, fruit cakes and oat cakes packed in tins for shipment overseas, at Rendell's.

Miss B. M. Cummins died in Vancouver on December 28. The deceased was well known in Greenwood, having lived here a few years ago, had been a most active worker during the recent Flu epidemic at the coast and had become run down, thereby falling an easy prey to the disease she had striven so bravely to combat. Interment took place in Victoria.

The scope of the Mounted Police will be extended from Port Arthur to Vancouver. There will be a barracks at Nelson.

The big fire in Kaslo happened February 25, 1894. Most of the men were drunk the next morning, and Big Georgie danced the Highland Fling on the ashes of the Noble Five hotel.

For the first time in the West if not in Canada, a soldier has been sentenced to life imprisonment for desertion. Private Demitro Gelenzyn is the man. He is now serving his term at Stoney Mountain Penitentiary, Manitoba.

T. Eaton Company of Toronto will on February 1 commence in Moncton the construction of a reinforced concrete building 240 feet wide and 240 feet long. It will be six stories in height. It is expected to be completed by the middle of the summer. The building will be used as a distributing warehouse for the maritime provinces, and will employ between 500 and 600 persons.

Canada possesses perhaps the most extensive fisheries in the world, those of Norway and of the British Isles alone disputing the supremacy, whether for excellance or the abundance and variety of their product. The fertility of Canadian waters is indicated by the fact that the entire catch of salmon, lobsters, herring, mackerel and sardines, nearly all the haddock, and many of the cod, hake and pollock landed are taken within ten or twelve miles from shore.

B. C. Mines

A lead war has been started in United States.

Leo Long, assayer, died in Seattle last month.

Ore from the Arlington dump, near Slocan City, is being shipped to Trail by M. S. Davys.

The Blue Grouse at Cowichan Lake is shipping steadily. The diamond drill is on the fifth hole.

Two miners have taken a lease on the Mollie Hughes at New Denver. It seems strange that no one takes a lease on the Mountain Chief.

Sidney Norman, editor of the Spokane Mining Truth is one of British Columbia's best friends. Sid was one of the romantic figures in the early days of the Slocan.

The Bosun mine near New Denver employs about 80 men. The mine is more than 20 years old. Bruce Kirk is foreman, and Dan Tattrie shift boss.

The Sunloch Mines Limited of Vancouver is diamond drilling its property at Jordan River, Vancouver Island, the development work being in charge of R. H. Stewart, M. E., of Vancouver, formerly of Trail.

At Ainsworth the Florence employs 50 men and the Highland 15. The No. 1 has 10 men doing development, and leasers are working small crews on the skyline, Maestro, Gallagher and Little Phil. The old camp is fairly active this winter.

The Hydraulic Company of Philadelphia is operating a plant on Twenty-mile creek, a tributary of the Quesnel river. Gold values there occur as fine particles disseminated through a 425-foot bank of gravel, boulder clay and silt, with black sand concentrates, which are said to carry platinum.

At Green Lake are three properties, the Fitsimmons group, now under development bond to the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company Limited; the Green Lake Mining and Milling company's group, and the King Solomon group. The mineralization on the Fitsimmons group consists of copper and iron sulphides, zinc blende and magnetite in altered limestone intruded by dykes. ore occurs in indefinite bunches up to 20 feet in width. A dump of 20 tons will average 3 per cent copper. Gold values are reported up to $20 a ton.

New Weapons of Warfare

At Camp Severe a captain was putting his company of recruits from the mountains through rudimentary drill, when the officer on inspection spoke to him sharply. "The faces of a number of your men are all scratched and bleeding," he said. "What is the matter? Has there been trouble in camp?"

The captain smiled sadly. "No, there has been no trouble," he answered. "Those fellows have just been learning to use their knives and forks."

Checks 300 per Minute

Electrical Machines Handle Thousands of Cards

The Canada registration board issues the following description of an electrical machine which is used by the board in checking and transferring the huge number of cards used.

Corresponding to the card of every registrant, there is now prepared a code card, to which all the information upon theoriginal card is being transierred by means of perforations, executed by a machine which registers with exactness. The purpose of this can best be understood by explaining that were there brought together the cards of 100 males, all British subjects by birth, all 29 years of age, all single, and all without apparent physical disabilities, the punch holes for those particular pieces of information would show clear through the 100 cards.

These perforated cards, when completed, will be put through sorting and tabulating machines, each speeded up to handle 300 cards per minute. By means of electrical contacts, the machines can be set for any combination desired; for example, were it a case of securing the names of military prospects in the city of Ottawa, the machines would be set for a combination similar to that mentioned above, except that the sorter would in one operation throw into twelve different pockets the cards of persons whose ages were, say, 29 to 40. As each perforated card is being typed with the name and address of the person of whom it is a record, it follows that information of a most valuable kind can be furnished on remarkably short notice.

The board hopes to be able to complete this week the clerical work involved in the preparation of the cards for use by these machines. Then, and not until then, will the real usefulness of registration begin to be appreciated.

GUARD THE CHILDREN FROM AUTUMN COLDS

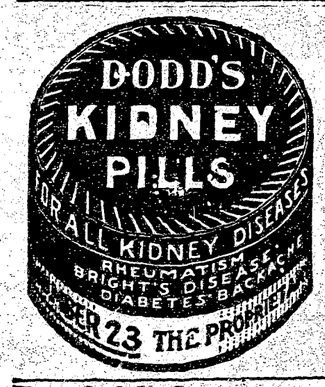
The Fall weather is the most severe season of the year for colds—one day is warm, the next is wet and cold and unless the mother is on her guard the little ones are seized with colds that may hang on all winter. Baby's Own Tablets are mothers' best friend in preventing or banishing colds. They act as a gentle laxative, keeping the bowels and stomach free and sweet. An occasional dose will prevent cold or if it does come on suddenly the prompt use of the Tablets will quickly cure it. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Dangerous Dentistry

Sufferer—I have a terrible toothache and want something to cure it.

Friend—Now, you don't need any medicine. I had tootache yesterday, and I went home and my loving wife kissed me and so consoled me that the pain soon passed away. Why don't you try the trick?

Sufferer—I think I will. Is your wife home now?—Vancouver Daily Province.



A Nation in its Homes

Should Not Be Judged Entirely by Cities

After all, how does a nation stand revealed more truly than in its homes? Its public appearances are frequently deceptive. It is what it is at home. A few years ago we heard a good deal about France as degenerating or at least becoming a static polity and civilization. Men had thoughtlessly taken the scintillating night life of Parisian boulevards for France. They had left out of account the tens of thousands of happy and frugal firesides in hundreds of small towns or tiny hamlets, dotting the gardens and fields of rural France, each one representative of hard working lives of peasantry and middle class, each one potently significant of matchless national spirit. . . . . It is not always safe to judge a nation by a single city, and forget the rural homes.

American globe-trotters make the "Grand World Tour," if not in eighty days, in less than as many weeks, which furnishes only a chance to whirl through the large cities and to see the regulation sights awaiting the regulation objectives, and the downpour of American dollars. We secure our ideas of Japanese men and women from the seat of the rolling rickshaw, and from the movies of Tokyo. From such angles of vision it may be easy to make wholesale criticisms of the morals of Japanese women, as some writers and travellers seem to delight to do, or compare unfavorably the Japanese, the "little brown men," with the heads of households we have known in many an American commonwealth. But let her traveller go to the quaint and artistic Nippon homes that breathe the breath of sobriety and homely loves beneath the cherry blossoms here, there, everywhere, throughout the Sunrise Kingdom, let him walk through the narrow streets of the mountain villages after nightfall and look through the thin rice paper shojis to find Japan. He will see large families, the grandfather at the seat of honor, and about him his sturdy sons and grandchildren; he will hear the glad laughter of children, and the strumming of the samisen, and in that shadow-picture about the braziers, he will see in truer light the strength and promise of the nation. —Clayton Sedgwick Cooper.

Byron Harrison, the Mississippi candidate for the senate, said in a recent address:

"The Germans claim to have culture, but to my mind it's pretty scarce. It's like the ham in the sandwich.

"A boy complained to the attendant in a cafeteria:

"'Say, there ain't no ham in this here sandwich!'

"'You haven't come to it yet,' consoled the attendant.

"The boy munched on for a while then he said:

"'There ain't none yet.'

"'Oh,' was the reply, 'you've bit over it now!'"

Catarrh Cannot be Cured

with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions, and in order to cure it you must take an internal remedy. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts through the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system. Hall's Catarrh Cure was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years. It is composed of some of the best tonics known, combined with some of the best blood purifiers. The perfect combination of the ingredients in Hall's Catarrh Cure is what produces such wonderful results in catarrhal conditions. Send for testimonials, free.

Everybody Is Doing It

Profiteering we learn with relief, is not only a United States monopoly. Herr Victor Karl Adels of the Mannesmann Arms and Munitions factories has been fined $375,000 and sentenced to six months in jail for profiteering, in three years, to the extent of at least $1,375,000. His methods appear to have been the familiar ones of commission broking and skimping on deliveries. Thus the imitative quality of the German mind is again exposed. Herr Adels appears to have been guilty of concealing far the greater part of his takings in order to escape hostile comment and the income tax. Vile imitator, again! The one anomaly in the story of Herr Adels lies in the magnitude of the fine imposed upon him. If profiteers on this side of the water were compelled to disgorge in the same proportion, the German Finanzministerium would turn green with envy.

Naval Nicknames

Curious nicknames are applied to vessels of the British navy. The Ariadne is known as the "Hairy Annie" or "Haggy Agony," the Narcissus as "Nasty Sister," the Cressy as the "Greater," the Inconstant as the "Inkstand," the Iphigenia as the "Silly Jane," the Lucifer as the "Match Box," the Hecate as the "He Cat" or "The Tom" and the Neptune as the "Jew's Harp."

In the United States navy similar nicknames have been used to some extent. The Sassacus was known as the "Sassy Cuss," the Miantonomoh as "My Aunt Don't Know You," the Wissahickon as the "Widow Higgins," the Winnebago or perhaps the Wyalusing as "We know She Goes Slow."

Powdered putty has been invented that can be colored as desired and mixed with water when it is to be used.

Heal Itching Pimples On Shoulders and Back.

"For two years I was troubled with itching pimples on my shoulders and back. They were hard, red and very painful, and were scattered. I could not rest at night on account of the itching.

"I tried several remedies but they failed. Then I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and I used three cakes of Cuticura Soap and four boxes of Cuticura Ointment and I was completely healed in six weeks." (Signed) Miss Kate Young, Melrose, Man., March 30, 1917.

Having obtained a clear healthy skin by the use of Cuticura, keep it clear by using the Soap for all toilet purposes, assisted by touches of Ointment as needed. Cuticura Soap is ideal for the complexion.

For Free Sample Each by Mail address post-card: "Cuticura, Dept. A, Boston, U. S. A." Sold everywhere.

Red Cross Donations

Saskatchewan Contributions Amount to Nearly as Much as All the Rest of Dominion

The province of Saskatchewan leads Canada in Red Cross donations for the year ending September 30 last, according to word just received from Canadian headquarters. Saskatchewan raised $1,153,000, the only province in Canada to reach the million dollar mark. Saskatchewan raised this amount as compared with only $1,652,000 for all the rest of the Dominion combined. The figures by provinces are as follows:

British Columbia	$ 115,000
Alberta	234,500
Saskatchewan	1,153,000
Manitoba	145,000
Quebec	155,000
New Brunswick	7,500
Nova Scotia	11,000
Prince Edward Island	12,500
Ontario	871,000
Total	$2,785,000

The Dominion's Natural Resources

Potential Wealth of Canada Brought to Attention of the Royal Geographical Society

At a recent meeting of the Royal Geographical society, the Hon. Arthur Meighen read a paper on "The Natural Resources of Canada." His audience comprised most of those public men who take a lively interest in the greater Britain overseas, and the close attention with which the speaker was followed seemed to promise gratifying results later on. Any man who is privileged to address the members of England's premier body of geographers is certain of a distinguished and influential audience.

While little that the minister of the interior said would strike any Canadian possessed of average information as new, it may have been quite otherwise under the circumstances of its delivery. It so it served an excellent purpose. Our natural resources are great; this we know; the next step is to see that those who may help develop these resources also realize their importance.

He spoke of the tremendous mountain ranges, not forgetting to mention that Mount Logan, in the St. Elias range of the Yukon, towers to 19,539 feet; of the great waterways; the lakes, almost seas, and of the 600,000,000 acres of forest. Our coal reserve is placed by Mr. Meighen at 1,234,000,000,000 tons, or equal to seven-tenths of all the known coal deposits under the British flag, of which the Canadian reserve in Alberta is thought to hold four-fifths. Happy Alberta!

It appears we have, according to the latest census, enough caribou roaming the so-called barren lands to feed the allied nations for years.

Dr. W. Miller, provincial geologist for Ontario, spoke at some length on the mineral resources of the Dominion, but unfortunately, his remarks, owing to an oversight, could not be reproduced with those of Mr. Meighen. The latter, seeing that a better authority was to deal with them, did little more than touch upon our nickel, copper, lead, gold, copper and other stores.

Many realize that, hitherto, settlement has made far greater strides in an east and west line than from south to north. In fact, Canada, so far as settlement is concerned, resembles somewhat a long, straggling street. From Halifax to Vancouver, and from Vancouver to Halifax the traveller faces the setting or the rising sun—never the pole star. Yet, as Mr. Meighen intimated, our aim should be to add depth to our occupation, and to enter into and fully possess the wonderful heritage this Dominion was intended to be. It has always been a tradition that the "up north" was practically uninhabitable, but those who have tried it, who know it best, do not say so; spring comes almost as soon on the Peace as on the St. Lawrence, and earlier, perhaps, in northern British Columbia than in Manitoba. Remoteness can be overcome; severity of climate was never much more than a bogy conjured up by the timid.

The Precious Ruby

Is Ten Times More Valuable Than Diamond

The world's ruby centre is Mogok, in Upper Burma, some seventy miles north of Mandalay in India. Here are the great ruby mines, one of Burma's most valuable monopolies. Indeed, not only does this country produce the finest of these coveted gems, but they are recovered in such quantities as to enable her to dominate the market.

Few are aware that, weight for weight, a ruby is more valuable than a diamond. It is estimated that one the color of pigeon's blood, weighing five carats, will sell for ten times the value of a diamond of the same weight. Furthermore, the price increases with the size of the stones.

As the "byon," or earth containing the coveted gems, is taken from the ground, it is placed in great revolving tubs. Here it is screened and all the loose earth removed by water. The residue is then tipped on to the sorting table. A white overseer carefully examines the pile, selecting the true gems from the worthless debris. If he is lucky he may at one sorting find gems worth many thousands of dollars, while on the other hand the yield may be but a hundred pounds or two. The yearly output of rubies from these mines totals about $400,000.

Small Economies Produce Big Results

England Saves Pulp by Conservation of Paper

In England every passenger on the street cars and omnibuses receives a small ticket in receipt for his fare. By simply reducing the size of the ticket by half an inch the London county council reports a saving of 100 tons of pulp per annum.

A thread manufacturer in Great Britain reports a saving of 150 tons of pulp per annum by affixing but one tiny label on the end of the spool of thread in place of one at each end as formerly was the practice.

The question of senseless waste of paper in the matter of handbills was dealt with and it was estimated that more than 1000 tons of pulp were absolute waste in this connection since more than half the handbills were a mere litter in the streets and on front porches, and never read.

By making railroad tickets half the thickness Engalnd has saved 400 tons of pulp.

By using postcards instead of paper and envelopes the numerous societies and organizations in Great Britain have saved 600 tons of pulp a year.

Dragged Down by Asthma. The man or woman who is continually subject to asthma is unfitted for his or her life's work. Strength departs and energy is taken away until life becomes a dreary existence. Champagne Catacombs

Millions of Bottles of Wine Hoarded in Vaults

The glory of Rheims is undoubtedly its mediaeval cathedral, and all its associations, says the Yorkshire Post, but I must confess that I was almost equally interested in what might be called its modern cathedral structures in the shape of the mile-long vaults serving as storage cellars for the champagne bottle—millions upon millions of them—hoarded up there. A walk through those Gothic-arched vaults — their walls all frescoed with illustrations of the worship of Bacchus and the history of viniculture—has an interest for some minds not inferior to that with which the tourist contemplates the painted windows and plaster saints of the above ground cathedral itself. In all the area of the western front there are no such capacious, secure, and seductive dugouts as the deep-down, miles-long, Gothic-vaulted cellars containing all the choicest vintages of the sparkling valley of the Marne. No wonder that in 1870 the Prussians found their Capua in Rheims, to which they moved their headquarters immediately after Sedan.

The British Museum

Has Again Opened Its Gates To Visitors

That massive and impressive pile, the British Museum, has, after a lapse of three years and more, opened its gates to visitors, the first to take advantage of it being some Australian soldiers who entered under the guidance of an official of the Y. M.C.A. It is just because of the evident wish of the overseas visitors to see all they can, while in London, that the decision of the museum authorities to take air raid risks as courageously as other buildings in London is the more welcome. Such extraordinary treasures as the figures of the Theseus Demeter and Persephone are hidden away deep down in the cellars, and other priceless things, such as the Parthenon frieze, are sandbagged. But casts, so perfect that it takes the keenest experts to detect the difference from the originals, are on view. If it had not been for the protests of many sections of the British public, the museum would long ago have been annexed to the aircraft department. It must be congratulated for having escaped unwelcome attentions from both friend and foe.

"Visiting Cards" at the North Pole

The silk flag which M. Amundsen is taking with him to plant at the North Pole—"if the opoprtunity presents itself" (says the London Observer) will be used, of course, for purely formal purposes, for the rights of the first comer belong to the United States, whose Stars and Stripes were planted there by Commander Peary on April 6, 1909. Naturally, every nation which achieves either Pole is anxious to leave a visiting card. When Scott reached the South Pole on January 17, 1912, he planted the Union Jack at a spot half a mile from the Norwegian flag which Amundsen had placed there some months earlier.

Poor Dog Under Shell Fire

In a letter describing the behavior of domestic animals under fire, a soldier says: A big black mongrel came into our improvised trench late one afternoon. He had survived a terrific ten hours' bombardment of shell and gas, and sank down by my side utterly exhausted. His body became inert and nothing, not even the tenderest bits of bully beef, would make him move. His brown eyes looked mournfully into mine as if longing to tell me something. Just then the boche commenced strafing and at every explosion a shiver ran through his body. I do not know what became of the poor beast. There was an engagement soon afterwards and this big, black mongrel disappeared.

Double Entry Bookkeeping Ancient

It comes as a surprise, very often, to find how far back in the centuries some of the ordinary things of every day life cast their roots. It may not be generally realized that double entry bookkeeping, for instance, adopted in most large businesses of the modern world, originated, or if it did not originate, was practised, among the mercantile communities of Italy in the fifteenth century. An early exponent of the method was a Minorite monk named Luca de Burgo, otherwise Paciali, who wrote and published a treatise on the subject in Venice in the year 1494, three years before Sebastian Cabot landed in America. The system survives as Luca de Burgo established it, with the exception of the few alterations necessitated by four centuries of commercial evolution.

Transferring the Bad Luck

A visitor on a British battleship was dining with a group of officers when his fork accidentally struck a glass tumbler. As the glass resounded the officers shouted as one man, "Boche." On asking for an explanation the visitor was told that the ringing of a glass meant bad luck. One officer declared that on one ship he formerly commanded every time a glass was rung a man fell overboard. This is why the officers now cry "Boche" when a table accident occurs, they hoping to transfer their bad luck to the enemy.

Pigmy Elephants

Considered a Most Important Zoological Discovery

Two specimens of a hitherto unknown species of elephant, a real dwarf variety, have been captured in Africa and were recently taken to England. This is considered a most important zoological discovery, comparable with that of the okapi in the Congo forest several years ago. These pigmy elephants grow to be 5½ or 6 feet high; that is, half the height at the shoulder of an ordinary African elephant. The tusks of the two dwarf elephants now in England are very dark, and display evidence of wear and tear and of exposure to a wet or muddy habitat. They are abnormally small. Those of the female weight about 1 pound each, and those of the male 3½ pounds each, compared with 110 pounds as the weight of one tusk of a grown African bull elephant.

Had Important Information

Brave French Woman Risks Life to Help Allies

The devotion of a French woman to her country was recorded recently at one of the American headquarters, to which a woman whose name cannot be mentioned, had made her way through shell fire and over a region filled with gas and traps to bring to the allies information concerning the Germans.

With her mother and younger brother the young woman, who is not yet twenty, had lived at Soulevre farm since the day it fell into the hands of the Germans four years ago. Four other brothers are in the French army. The mother, daughter and boy were forced to remain within the German lines and witness the day-by-day conversion of their property into a German club house. During these four years the two women endeavored to placate rather than to antagonize their captors.

From German officers who frequented the farm the young woman learned information which she recognized to be of the utmost importance. When she heard the barrage she determined to run the risk of crossing the nearly three miles separating her home from the allied lines.

Telling her mother and the others that she had work to do in the garden, the young woman left the house. She slipped away toward the American lines, although every road was swept by allied and German gunfire. After many difficulties and narrow escapes the young woman reached the American lines and told her story.

In return for the information she brought she asked that every effort be made to rescue her mother and brother. The Germans attempted to maintain their position at Soulevre farm, but the Americans overcame them in desperate fighting.

The mother and brother were brought to American headquarters uninjured and there was a joyful reunion.

Sloan's Liniment Kills Pain

Guests Carry Away Cutlery and Glassware

The keeper of a restaurant frequented by Berliners when taking their outings in the suburbs raises the following plaint in the Berliner Tageblatt:

"You have no idea what our guests carry away with them. We cannot hand out teaspoons without demanding a guarantee sum beforehand. Drinking glasses are stolen more than anything else. When I took stock in March I counted 352 glasses, but a week after Whitsuntide I had only sixty-four left. It is quite the same with coffee pots; I have lost 152 enamelled pots. Knives, forks and spoons disappear in the same way without number.

"A short time ago I handed out a dinner of eight portions. As the party appeared to be rich people and ran up a big bill, the waiter did not remove the things immediately after they had finished. When he did so a little later he found that the knives, forks and spoons had disappeared from all the covers but two. That is only one example from many. Under these circumstances, the prohibition of the use of tablecloths and napkins came as a read godsend for us. If it had not come, there would soon have been not a scrap of table linen among all us restaurant keepers. It goes without saying that keepers who try to keep poultry or other small animals suffer from thieving attacks."

He Cannot Sleep

IT isn't the body that craves rest, but the mind.

When you are bodily tired you can usually fall to sleep at the first opportunity.

But when the nerves are irritated by anxiety and worry rest and sleep seem to be impossible.

The mind seems to be most alert, and you are thinking, thinking, thinking—first of one thing and then of another—often matters of little or no importance. But you simply cannot sleep.

Sleeplessness is the most common and often the first indication of a breaking down of the nervous system.

The object of sleep is to allow the body to rebuild tissue and the nerves to recover tone. Sleep is the ideal condition for this process.

If you cannot sleep you worry, and worry breaks down nerve cells at a tremendous rate, so that instead of laying up nerve force for the demands of the day you are using up the reserve.

The nerve centres are sometimes likened to storage batteries. If you continue to consume the nervous energy in reserve, without paying back, these centres become sooner or later depleted, and you find yourself a nervous wreck.

After a sleepless night you get up feeling tired and lacking in mental energy. Your day's work seems more than you can face, and you become down-hearted and discouraged.

The future is not bright, for you must realize that the natural result is exhausted nerves, paralysis, locomotor ataxia or some form of helplessness.

In Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is found the most natural and the most rational treatment for the nerves imaginable, because this food cure contains the vital substances which go to the building up of the blood and the depleted nerve cells.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food does not induce sleep, but it does restore the nervous system, and after you have been using it for a few days you will begin to find yourself resting and sleeping naturally.

A little patience is necessary if your nervous system is greatly exhausted, but you will be encouraged by the benefits obtained to keep up the treatment until the exhausted nerves are fully restored, and you feel the energy and snap which means success and happiness.

The King and His Cousin

George V. Most Deeply Attached to Former Czar

King George is said by some who probably know nothing about it, to have been deeply overcome when he learnt of the assassination of the ex-czar. Of all the monarchs in Europe it was to his cousin, the Czar, that he was most deeply attached: their personal intimacy was close, we are assured on the same authority. It will be remembered at the time of the revolution that it was stated how anxious King George personally was to offer immediate hospitality to the deposed emperor, but was reluctantly compelled to perceive how impossible such a step would be diplomatically. That does not tend to alleviate His Majesty's grief. It is violating no secret to say that the king never extended to the Tsarina any greater measure of friendship than due courtesy. His affection was concentrated on her husband.

Those Rich, Heavy Silks

Few women who are proud of the fact that they wear hosiery, underwear and dresses made of silk realize that old tin cans contribute from 20 to 30 pod cent. in weight to the glossy silks worn by them, says the Popular Science Monthly. The price of silk has increased enormously and to be able to sell heavy silks at a price that would yield a reasonable profit, and yet be within the means of the average purchasers, the manufacturers resort to the practice of weighting the silk with tin tetrachloride, derived from tin cans. Five thousand tons of tin were used for that purpose in 1917.

The New Peddler of Paris

Four Year Old Sells Flags for War Charity

Peddlers along the boulevards of Paris are beside themselves with envy and indignation. There is a newcomer in their midst, who, though a stranger in the ways of vending, has had a greater net revenue in the first month of activity than the old-timers have in the course of the year. Not only that, but he makes his sales so easily. There is no tireless and tiring walking to and fro, up and down in front of the cafe terraces. He is not subject to rebuffs. He simply takes up his position at a given spot, and remains there until his wares are all disposed of, and they certainly go quickly.

It might be imagined that the secret lies in the nature of the wares, but there is nothing so vastly interesting or alluring in small, cheaply made flags of the allies. The attraction is in the peddler himself. He is one of the sweetest-faced little cherubs, not more than four years old, with pink cheeks, clear, sparkling black eyes, and black hair falling in curls down over a spotlessly white little-boy costume. His flags are stuck in a basket which is suspended from his neck by a white ribbon, and his chubby hands are kept busy placing them in the hands of willing buyers. The war charity for which the child is working should be much better equipped with funds since he began. Also the woman always on the fringe of the crowd watching him as only a mother can, cannot but be satisfied that she is vicariously doing her bit.

When Pigskin is Pigskin

Leatherwork Made From This Skin Nearly Indestructible

Probably you have some time or other in your life bought a pair of pikskin leggings or putties. How do you know they are pigskin? As a matter of fact there is no leather in the world just like pigskin in wearing quality. A saddle, a holster, or a pair of putties made of this homely material will come pretty near proving indestructible.

There is one easy way by which you can always tell pigskin. Examine it closely and you will find that the little black spots on the outside of the hide are always located in groups of three. The whole surface will look speckled, but these specks will be there in groups of three, always and without fail, in any hide once worn by a porker.

Another part of the test is to look at the grain side of the hide. You will find here that there are holes all the way through. As a matter of fact, the bristles of the hog grow entirely through the skin, and are nourished not by the skin itself but by the fatty tissues of the animal.

Comfort for the Dyspeptic.—There is no ailment so harassing and exhausting as dyspepsia, which arises from defective action of the stomach and liver, and the victim of it is to be pitied. Yet he can find ready relief in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, a preparation that has established itself by years of effective use. There are pills that are widely advertised as the greatest ever compounded, but not one of them can rank in value with Parmelee's.

Thugs Were Once A Religious Sect

Highly Organized Community Lived by Robbery

The word "thug" has an interesting historical origin and comes to us from India. In a recent address Rudyard Kipling told the story as follows:

"Once upon a time, a hundred years ago, there was a large and highly organized community in India who lived by assassination and robbery. They were educated to it from their infancy; they followed it as a profession, and it was also their religion. They were called Thugs. Their method was to disguise themselves as pilgrims or merchants and to join with parties of pilgrims, travellers and merchants moving about India. They got into the confidence of their victims, found out what they had on them, and in due time—after weeks or months of acquaintance — they killed them by giving them poisoned foods — sweetmeats for choice — or by strangling them from behind, as they sat over the fire of an evening, with a knotted towel or a specially prepared piece of rope. They then stripped the corpse of all valuables, threw it down a well, or buried it, and went on to the next job.

"At last things got so bad that the government of India had to interfere. Like all governments, it created a department—the department of Thuggee—to deal with the situation. Unlike most departments, this department worked well, and after many years of tracking down and hanging up the actual murderers, and imprisoning their spies and confederates, who included all ranks of society, it put an end to the whole business of Thuggee."

Protect Bird Sanctuaries

Dr. R. M. Anderson of the geological survey has left for the western provinces to complete the examination which he began last year of the sites reserved by the department of the interior as proposed bird sanctuaries. Twenty-eight of these areas known to be breeding places for wild fowl have been set aside and those which are found to be suitable it is proposed to declare bird sanctuaries and have them as such protected.

Dogs' Wool

Is Sterilized and Cleaned Before Spinning

The spinning of dogs' wool has proved a success, and several offices have been opened in London to receive and prepare the combings. The Ladies' Kennel Association, Belfast Chambers, Beak street, Regent street, W. receive the wool, sterilize it and clean it, after which it is sent to the central work rooms for spinning. The wool from Pekinese and collies is especially beautiful; the old grey sheep dog is also responsible for delightful knitted jackets that stand no end of wear and launder beautifully. All soft haired dogs yield lovely wool and the hair from wire haired dogs is used to stuff pillows for the wounded. The Countess of Gosford, Royal Academy, Picadilly, W., has charge of this industry.

NEW HEALTH FOR WOMEN

The most fateful years in a woman's life are those between forty-five and fifty. Many of the sex enter this period under depressing conditions through overwork or worry about the home, or through a condition in which the blood is weak or watery and so they suffer heavily. Among the commonest symptoms are headaches, feverish flushes, palpitation of the heart, dizziness, backache, depression and other well recognized disturbances of the health which signalizes that the blood requires attention. Women urgently need rich, red blood all their lives, but never more so than in middle-life, when the nerves are also weak and overwrought.

Now every woman can prove the prompt help afforded to her health by renewing and building up the blood. It is a test that any ailing woman can make by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, for these pills make rich, red blood, which in turn stimulates the appetite, strengthens the nerves and restores full robust health. Thousands of women have found in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills new health and strength and with these a new happiness and interest in life.

So if you suffer, avail yourself at once of the splendid home treatment which Dr. Williams' Pink Pills so easily afford, and you will be among those who rejoice in regained health. These pills are sold by all dealers in medicine, or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Bulgarian Outrages

Premier Venizelos, in visiting Seres, Macedonia, which has been occupied by Greek troops, found that of the 24,000 inhabitants, 5,000 had died of starvation, 11,000 had been deported and 2,000 had been forced to work on military roads in the Bulgarian occupation. The remaining inhabitants, including women dressed in mourning, told the premier of crimes committed against the Greeks in the two years the Bulgarians held the town.

Worms, however generated, are found in the digestive tracts, where they set up disturbances detrimental to the health of the child. There can be no comfort for the little ones until the hurtful intruders have been expelled. No better preparation for this purpose can be had than Miller's Worm Powders. They will immediately destroy the worms and correct the conditions that were favorable to their existence.

New Frightfulness Tried by Huns

The Germans have been using in their air work a new type of inflammable bomb, combining great effectiveness with light weight. A single airplane, it is said, can carry 200 of these bombs.

The only way of fighting the fire caused by this new form of destructive weapons appears to be the isolation of the blaze set, as pouring water on it is literally adding fuel to the flames, on account of the chemicals of which the bombs are composed.

There was never a time when the sacrifices and the help of women were more appreciated than at the present time. Women should learn war-nursing and nursing at home. There is no better way than to study the new edition of the "Common Sense Medical Adviser"—with chapters on First Aid, Bandaging, Anatomy, Hygiene, care of the Sick, Diseases of Women, Mother and Babe, Marriage—to be had at some drug-stores or send 50c. to Dr. Pierce, Courtwright St., Bridgeburg, Ontario.

If a woman suffers from weak back, nervousness or dizziness—if pains afflict her, the best tonic and corrective is one made up of native herbs, and made without alcohol, which makes weak women strong and sick women well. It is the prescription of Doctor Pierce, used by him in active practice many years and now sold by almost every druggist in the land, in liquid or in tablets. Send Dr. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Cambrai Has a Long History

Until Recent Times Was Fortress of Considerable Strength

The little town of Cambrai, which climbs up the slope on the eastern bank of the Scheldt at one end of the St. Quentin canal, some 14 miles northeast of Peronne, was for the greater part of its history, and until quite recent times, a fortress of considerable strength. It was, indeed, Charlemagne who first built walls around it, and thence onward it figures prominently in the history of northern France as a place "forever in dispute." When the battle was not laid between rival princes at home, or when Cambrai was not beset by foreign invaders it was the scene of the most violent hostilities between the Bishop of Cambrai and his supporters on the one hand and the citizens on the other. The sturdy inhabitants, after keeping up the struggle intermittently for some three hundred years, finally, in the twelfth century, achieved their independence and wrested rights and privileges from the great church dignitary who ruled over them, which ever afterward they jealously guarded.

There always seems to have been a town hereabouts. As in the case of most ancient towns, the site is an old one. Cambrai was Cambaracum in the days when Caesar "overcame the Nervii," and Cambaracum was an ancient Nervian town which finds mention in the Antonine Itinerary.

And so since the time that the legions of the great Caesar took it, down past the time that Charlemagne fortified it, right through to the present day Cambrai, as has been said, has moved in and out of French history. Most of its entrances and exits have been warlike ones, yet Cambrai, during the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries and for long afterward, was noted as a place of trade and affairs. The town indeed gave its name to that fine linen, produced here in such abundance in the fifteenth century, which in England came to be held in high regard under the name of cambric, but in France as batiste after the name of its inventor, one Baptiste, whose statue still stands on the "Esplanade."

It is some time now since Cambrai decided that its fighting days were all behind it, or at any rate that its fortifications were not of much value, and proceeded to raze them, and the outbreak of the present great struggle found the little city on the banks of the Scheldt an open town. The fortifications with which it was formerly surrounded, had for the most part been demolished. The fosses had been filled in and the ramparts, in part, leveled to make way, as the suburbs extended, for avenues stretching out on all sides. The chief survivals of this energetic demolition are the huge square citadel, which still rises to the east of the town, the chateau de Selles and such gates as the Porte Notre Dame and the Porte Robert.

Learned Lesson from Brute

Dog Took a Hand in Fight and Vanquished Combatants

Three men in Brooklyn, neighbors and friends, were sent to St. Catherine's hospital recently suffering with dog bites, and were attended by the surgeons. The men were sitting in the backyard of the residence of one of them and got into an argument which turned into a free-for-all fight. The dog of one of the men, who was lying asleep, said to himself: "Is not this a pretty picture? Men have no right to make brutes of themselves; much less friends who have no reason for a difference. But since they really want to fight so badly, I will teach them how to do the trick."

And so he rushed in and began to bite them terribly, not sparing his master. Stung with the pain, they turned from knocking each other to fight the dog; but he was too much for them, and cleaned out the crowd. Completely vanquished, the men made a break for a high fence and climbed upon that, but the dog chewed the calves of their legs till they pulled themselves up out of his reach atop the fence. The dog then went back to his corner as though saying to himself: "Now I guess they are cured. It will be a good while before they will disturb the peace of this neighborhood again, or disgrace my backyard." And they were cured, sure enough. All the fight was gnawed out of them. They did not want to fight each other, and from considerations of penitence and prudence, they did not even want to fight the dog.

Throwing Chalk for Luck

In throwing a piece of chalk after his men for luck as they poured into the enemy's trenches, the Irish colonel was but reviving a superstition which dates back to the ancient days of Thrace, where the custom originated of marking lucky days with a white stone and unlucky ones with a black one, says the London Chronicle.

In its early youth Rome adopted the custom, and although chalk, not being indigenous, was chiefly known, as its name, Creta, implies, as an import from Crete, it was generally used for the marking of lucky days. According to Horace, the marking was done with chalk for good and coal for bad luck.

Saving the Waste of War

Every Man Does His Bit in Salvage Line

On the battle front the palmy days of plenty are gone.

What was once thrown broadside round the country in wasteful quantities, and left to rot or disappear in the verdure of fair France, is now carefully picked up and carted off to the salvage dump. Clothing, ammunition, empty tins, fat—in fact, everything which may still be made useful — is collected at the various dumping grounds, where it is sorted, packed in suitable bundles, and despatched to the bases to be utilized in manufactures of all kinds.

Nowadays every man is exhorted individually to do his bit in the salvage line. In addition, parties are engaged specially to reconnoitre the battle area for materials that may be saved and used.

A few figures taken at random from salvage returns may serve to show what diligence and care will save the armies and the nation.

In one week it is estimated that one division salved $500,000 worth of ammunition and explosives.

In the same week another division salved $20,000 worth of clothing and kit; another salved $20,000 odd in rifles and bayonets.

These figures do not by any means represent the highest values recorded in these returns. And when we consider the number of other articles that may be salved in the wake of an army and the number of divisions we have fighting in the various theatres of war, we begin to realize what a tremendous saving "salvage operations" must prove to the army.

New Troops Are Doing Admirably

Welcomed Warmly as Comrades by Veterans, Who Say They Are Fine

In a cable to the director of public information at Ottawa, Fred. James, official correspondent of the Canadian overseas forces in France, pays high tribute to the men popularly termed "new troops."

These men, he states, absorb the spirit of pride and the splendid morale radiated by the corps from the moment of their arrival. Mr. James cables:

"They received their first baptism of fire at Amiens, and have been prominent in all the recent terrible fighting, and have contributed their share to the success of the cause.

"They are warmly welcomed as comrades in arms by veterans, who declare the new men to be fine.

"'They stop at nothing,' the older soldiers declare, 'and will follow anywhere through thick and thin. And they are staying in the game without grousing.'

"Among those who have been awarded decorations or recommended for such are the names of many who left Canada this year, arriving in France since May."

Adam and Eve Were Prussians

Sort of Religion Preached in Run Churches

"Only yesterday our pastor was explaining in a convincing manner that Adam and Eve were Prussians. That is easy to understand, for in the Bible it is written that our German God has created us according to His own image."

The writer, the daughter of a government architect in Germany, goes on:

"If, therefore, all men have descended from a Prussian Adam and from his wife, there should only exist Prussians, or at least Germans, and everything that grows and exists should belong to us. That is why our device is 'God with us and Germany over all.'

"Is it not shameful that other peoples who have no right to exist on this earth, should wish to reduce our inheritance? We are the divine fruit and all others are but weeds. That is why our great emperor, representing God on earth, has decided to put an end to all these injustices and to exterminate the weeds."

Marshal Foch's Baton

The marshal's baton presented to Marshal Foch by the president of the French Republic is a very beautiful and elaborate affair. The staff, upon a rich olue velvet ground, bears thirty chased gold stars. On one of the ends, also of chased gold, are engraved the marshal's name and the date of his appointment; the other bears the traditional device of French marshals: "Terror belli decus pacis." It is a superb work of art.

WOMEN! IT IS MAGIC! LIFT OUT ANY CORN

Apply a few drops then lift corns or calluses off with fingers—no pain

Just think! You can lift off any corn or callus without pain or soreness.

A Cincinnati man discovered this ether compound and named it freezone. Any druggist will sell a tiny bottle of freezone, like here shown, for very little cost. You apply a few drops directly upon a tender corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears, then shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you can lift it right off.

Freezone is wonderful. It dries instantly. It doesn't eat away the corn or callus, but shrivels it up without even irritating the surrounding skin.

Hard, soft or corns between the toes, as well as painful calluses, lift right off. There is no pain before or afterwards. If your druggist hasn't freezone, tell him to order a small bottle for you from his wholesale drug house.

A Nice Holiday

"How did you spend your week's vacation?"

"I spent a day and a half going to a place where I would have nothing to do, one day doing nothing, three days with a headache from doing nothing, and a day and a half getting back to where I could do something."—Life.

EASIEST CORN REMEDY, PAINLESS---NEVER FAILS

Just think of it—instant relief the minute you put a few drops of Putnam's Extractor on your sore corn. Putnam's makes corns dry up, makes them shrivel and peel off. It doesn't eat the good flesh, it acts on the corn alone, loosens it so you can lift it out with your fingers. Wonderful; you bet Putnam's is a marvel, and costs but a quarter in any drug store. Why pay more for something not so good as Putnam's?

Narrow Escape of Two Kings

Sovereigns of Wurtemburg and Saxony Flee from Dadizelle

From civilians freed from the Germans in Flanders it was learned that the kings of Wurtemburg and Saxony both narrowly escaped having something happen to them at Dadizelle, northwest of Menin. Both monarchs were in the town when the British guns suddenly opened up on it with a whirlwind bombardment. They fled in a hurry, and, so far as is known, managed to get away safely.

Some enlightening information was gained from these liberated Flemings. Some of them from Ledeghem said that ever since the Germans first came to their town in 1914 they had forced all civilians to sleep on the floors, while husky Germans occupied their beds. Twenty-eight of the villagers were killed by the Germans. One of these was taken out, stood against a wall and shot. The villagers were fed by the American commission for relief in Belgium, they said, but the Germans always took this food away from them and gave them their own German rations, which invariably were bad and unfit to eat.

It was on September 28 that the Germans ordered the villagers of Ledeghem to evacuate the place, but many of them hid in cellars or in the suburbs of the town, where they remained until the British entered. The Germans told the villagers that they would like to surrender to the Scottish troops, but that the Scots had the nasty habit of cutting the throats of the Germans when they caught them, and, therefore, they were afraid to take a chance. The Germans, villagers said, also told them terrible things the British would do to the villagers when they entered the town.

According to the villagers, many German horses have died in Flanders because there was no food of any kind for them, and the German automobiles all are running on their rims because the Germans have no tires.

Argentinian Sentenced

Despatches from Rome report that a military court at Bologna has passed a sentence of death on Luis Alfredo Beltrame, an Argentinian, who is now acting as the manager of a German propaganda news agency in Buenos Ayres. It was charged that Beltrame, as an agent of the central powers, had sent military information from Italy to Switzerland. He was exiled from Italy two years ago, and since then has been active in the interests of Germany.

A man named Dodgin had been appointed foreman in a brickyard, but his name was not known to all the employes. One day while on his round he came across two men sitting in a corner smoking and stopped near them. "Who are you?" asked one of them. "I'm Dodgin, the new foreman," he replied. "So are we," replied the othe workers. "Sit down and have a smoke."

Raids Made on Rhine Towns

All the Way From Cologne to Baden Successful Attacks Have Been Made

British airmen during the past three months have wrought heavy damage to military objectives in western Germany and enforced withdrawal of several enemy air squadrons from the battlefront in a vain endeavor to protect the raided territory, the British bureau of information announced in a review of the activities of the British independent air force.

A 250-mile belt of the Rhine Valley, in which are located the principal German war industries and railway systems vital to maintenance of the Teuton lines in France, has been brought definitely into the war area, the statement said. Fliers of the independent air force have raided enemy territory 249 times and dropped 147 tons of bombs on strategic points. Aside from destroying or damaging munitions and poison gas factories, railway stations and trains, it was stated the attacks have had a widespread moral effect, demonstrated by dozens of public meetings in the Rhine towns, demanding cessation of aerial warfare.

All the way from Cologne to Baden, the British review stated, the aviators have conducted successful raids, despite heavy concentrations of enemy machines. In September alone 21 German industrial towns were raided and more than 100 tons of bombs dropped on them.

A Terrible Train

Hundreds of Repatries Sent Daily Back to France

"Every morning and every evening, week ends excepted, a train crosses the German frontier and enters the station at Bale, which is on the right side of the Rhine. It contains from six to seven hundred repatries, being the women and children, the aged and infirm of the occupied parts of France. As the train noisily clatters (remember they are short of grease in Germany) into the station, its occupants begin cheering, singing, and waving their handkerchiefs, but the cheers are never a success; they unexpectedly break off into sobs, and the handkerchiefs are withdrawn rather suddenly," says a writer in the New Statesman, describing opinion in Switzerland.

"The carriage doors are opened, the old and feeble are lifted out—sometimes only their bodies can be moved, because two or three days in an unclean third-class carriage, without proper attention, is not good for invalids—the babies are carried off and bathed in a Red Cross railway ambulance car labelled 'Au Bonheur des Dames,' everybody is made clean, the old are put to bed for a few hours' rest, and everybody is fed and freed for a few blessed hours of pottering about before getting into another train—a clean, French train, for France.

"The repatries are looked after while in Bale by local, therefore German-Swiss Red Cross women, of whom there are fifty to each train, working two or three shifts a week. Those women are not quite ideally neutral. Repetition of the same scene has not taught them to repress their feelings."

Booze Hypocrites

The Vancouver Critic says:

"Mr. Findlay was named by the executive of the prohibition party, and upon their recommendation he was a appointed. We all know the results. How many more active prohibitionists are in Findlay's class?

We happen to know that during the prohibition campaign, that certain office of the Yorkshire Hotel, where certain prohibitionists were wont to gather that year was drunk and afterwards the janitor gathered the bottles, one night they became so disgustingly sick that the janitor refused to clean the office, and was fired for refusing. The man took the position of janitor through force of circumstances. He is a writer and a newspaper man and will not hesitate to make an affidavit as to the truth of the above statement. While all prohibitionists do not belong to this class, yet there are many who do, It is a matter of dollar and cents with them."

I've Found A Friend

I have found a most wonderful thing.

It is a friend.

Strange! If I had found a million dollar bill, or had been elected president of the Pawnee railroad, I should have made a feast and invited all the neighbors to come and rejoice with me.

Cows in Korea

It is a funy thing to see the cows at work in Korea as well as the oxen. When we think of Mooley and Sukey and Mrs. Jersey, it is of the fine milk and butter they will give us. But it is not this way in Korea. Milk and butter are almost unknown in the native homes of Korea.

A Korean might keep a dozen cows, but if you asked him for milk he would look at you in amazement. His cows are to carry great loads of wood or farm products to market, or to haul the big, lumbersome two-wheeled carts or the ungainly log plow. Just think of it! No milk, no butter, no cheese! Too bad, isn't it? "Yet," writes a medical missionary, "it is doubtless a wise thing for Korea, where no heed is paid to sanitary laws. Milk, being one of the most dangerous mediums for bacteria, it is no doubt best, after all, that the Korean, with no regard whatever for the laws of health, has never learned to use it." Now the doctors are telling us that even scarlet fever is traceable to impure milk, as it contains the very germ—with a long unpronounceable name—that is present in scarlet fever. This is why, they reason, the disease is almost unknown in sections where raw milk is little used, especially in the tropics.

A Korean seeing butter used in a missionary home, expressed his loathing. To him it was not only a "disgustible mess," but it was made from calf feed (milk). Neither does the Korean eat beef to any extent. His cows are too useful as beasts of burden to be slaughtered.

A missionary, reaching his station in one of the interior towns of Korea expressed a desire to purchase a milch cow for the use of his family. The Koreans to whom he expressed his desire were amazed, No such thing had ever been heard of around there, they told him. No cow had ever had milk drawn from her udder by human hand. That was the calf's business. What was more, no cow would put up with it.

Undismayed, the missionary proceeded to select a cow with a young calf. "There's trouble coming to you," the man from whom he purchased told him.

The moment the hand of the milker pressed upon the cow's udder, her hiud feet flew into the air. Her feet were then roped, and head and tail were held by the missionary's native helpers; one clinging to each horn. Finding it impossible to get rid of that hateful hand, pulling away at her teats, by either horn or hoof, she stood trembling and bellowing incessantly, every inch of her body an outraged protest against the indignity ... which she was compelled to sub... But in time, and by employ... thods, the mission... so even the ... whenever ... mit. ... ing coaxing m... ary soon had his co... children could milk her w... they pleased. The Koreans can... for miles to see the novel performance, the news of which had been heralded abroad.—A. M. Barnes.

Five Years on Polar Diet

All Arctic explorers before Stefansson always governed their operations by the amount of food taken with them, the general rule to go no further north than half their food supplies would serve for. Stefansson adopted a new plan, that of depending on the natural food supply of the Far North. Because of the loss of the ship Karluk, with all its stores, Stefansson and his men were forced to put the food theory to a more rigid test than they had intended. Indeed, for the greater part of five years they subsisted almost entirely on animals and fish. On their bill of fare were polar bears, seals, reindeer, musk ox, and wolves. Only one of the party oblected to wolf meat, and that on the ground that it was against the dietary laws in the Book of Deuteronomy; the others declared that the wolf meat was the best food they had. They laughed to scorn the idea that the Arctic regions are barren, and declared that, in a sense, it is easier to make a living up in the Arctic region than in a place like New York City.

Two of a Kind

An American spending his holidays in County Roscommon, Ireland, fell into a conversation with a farmer who was feeding his hens: "I guess, Pat, you havon't as good hens here as we have in the States? "Perhaps not." said Pat. "I'll tell you," said the Yankee, "about a hen my mother had. She went out one day and ate a feed of corn and returned and laid twelve eggs. She went out the next day and ate a feed of corn, and laid 12 more eggs. She went out the third day and returned and laid twelve more eggs. She went out the fourth day and hatched seventy-two chicks out of the thirty-six eggs. Now that is the kind of hens we have in the States." "Well," said Pat. "I'll tell you about a half-blind hen my mother had. She ate a feed of sawdust, thinking it was oatmeal; she went to her nest and laid a plank 12 feet long. Again on the second day she ate more sawdust, and laid another plank twelve feet long On the third day she ate more sawdust, and laid another twelve foot plank. She sat on the three planks and hatched three kitchen chairs, a sofa, one table, a mahogany chest of drawers. "Now" said Pat, with a twinkle in his eye, "that is the kind of hen we have in Roscommon.

Float

FLOAT is not a periodical. It is a book containing 86 illustrations all told, and is filled with sketches and stories of western life. It tells how a gambler cashed in after the flush days of Sandon; how it rained in New Denver long after Noah was dead; how a parson took a drink at Bear Lake in early days; how justice was dealt in Kaslo in '93; how the saloon man outprayed the women in Kalamazoo, and graphically depicts the roamings of a western editor among the tender-feet in the cent belt. It contains the early history of Nelson and a romance of the Silver King mine. In it are printed three western poems, and dozens of articles too numerous to mention. SYNOPSIS OF LAND ACT AMENDMENT

Pre-emption now confined to surveyed lands only.

Records will be granted covering only land suitable for agricultural purposes and which is non-timber land.

Partnership pre-emptions abolished, but parties of not more than four may arrange for adjacent pre-emptions, with joint residence, but each making necessary improvements on respective claims.

Pre-emptors must occupy claims for five years and make improvements to value of $10 per acre, including clearing and cultivation of at least 5 acres, before receiving Crown Grant.

Where pre-emptor in occupation not less than 3 years, and has made proportionate improvements, he may, because of ill-health or other cause, be granted intermediate certificate of improvement and transfer his claim.

Records without permanent residence may be issued provided applicant makes improvements to extent of $300 per annum and records same each year. Failure to make improvements or record same will operate as forfeiture. Title cannot be obtained on these claims in less than 5 years, with improvements of $10 per acre, including 5 acres cleared and cultivated, and residence of at least 2 years.

Pre-emptor holding Crown Grant may record another pre-emption, if he requires land in conjunction with his farm, without actual occupation, provided statutory improvements made and residence maintained on Crown granted land.

Unsurveyed areas, not exceeding 20 acres, may be leased as homesites; title to be obtained after fulfilling residential and improvement conditions.

For grazing and industrial purposes, areas exceeding 640 acres may be leased by one person or company.

PRE-EMPTORS' FREE GRANTS ACT.

The scope of this Act is enlarged to include all persons joining and serving with His Majesty's Forces. The time within which the heirs or devisees of a deceased pre-emptor may apply for title under this Act is extended from one year from the death of such person, as formerly, until one year after the conclusion of the present war. This privilege is also made retroactive.

TOWNSITE PROPERTY ALLOTMENT ACT.

Provision is made for the grant to persons holding uncompleted Agreements to Purchase from the Crown of such proportion of the land, if divisible, as the payments already made will cover in proportion to the sale price of the whole parcel. Two or more persons holding such Agreements may group their interests and apply for a proportionate allotment jointly. If it is not considered advisable to divide the land covered by an application for a proportionate allotment, an allotment of land of equal value selected from available Crown lands in the locality may be made. These allotments are conditional upon payment of all taxes due the Crown or to any municipality. The rights of persons to whom the purchaser from the Crown has agreed to sell are also protected. The decision of the Minister of Lands in respect to the adjustment of a proportionate allotment is final. The time for making application for these allotments is limited to the 1st day of May, 1919. Any application made after this date will not be considered. These allotments apply to town lots and lands of the Crown sold at public auction.
