Jordan Mine Now Free Of Water

VANCOUVER (CP)—The Cowichan Copper mine at Jordan River, flooded since December, now is to all intents and purposes free from water, president O. G. MacDonald said Monday night.

Mr. MacDonald said installation of a concrete bulkhead was completed Friday, sealing off the worked-out portion of the Sunro Mine where a cave-in Dec. 6 admitted the waters of the Jordan River, flooding the mine.

He said the company had four pumps working through the weekend and by Monday the mine was, for practical purposes "completely dewatered".

"As we anticipated," he said, "there has been no damage to the shaft, the crusher, the mill roof or the transformer station."

"We expect to have our financing arranged by the end of May and to be in production no later than the end of June.

"It's a case only of clean-up and dry-up."

He said three or four examination parties from interests which may advance money to the mine are to go through it with a view to making financial proposals to the company. He said the company expects to borrow about $1,000,000.
