Court Sets Cowichan Copper Date

Cowichan Copper must hold its annual general meeting on Sept. 9, according to a Supreme Court order made by Mr. Justice Rae.

He made the order on application of the company's former secretary-treasurer Edward C. Dobell. He also awarded Dobell costs in the action. Cowichan Copper was not represented at the hearing.

The annual meeting will be held at 10 a.m. in Hotel Vancouver.

Last March, Dobell won another Supreme Court action giving him 450,000 common shares of Cowichan. He had sued Oswood G. MacDonald, company president, for breach of an agreement in which he lent the company $90,000 secured by a company debenture with conversion privileges.

Mr. Justice Rae's order said the meeting, subject to the presence of a quorum, would be empowered to proceed with the election of directors and auditors and conduct all other business of an annual general meeting.
