Scouts entertain

Members of the OAPO were guests on Friday evening, Dec.
15 at a concert given by First Gibsons Boy Scouts and their leaders.

The guests were transported to and from the affair, with a Scout in attendance with each car.

The program was well chosen, with a sing-song by the boys and in a later part community singing. Two short skits were given by the boys doing a fine job, and giving everyone a fine chuckle.

A fine film on Conservation of Wild Life followed and refreshments were then served by the boys. All this was done by the Scouts with the help of two ladies staffing the kitchen.

A film on the life of Baden-Powell was shown, giving insights in the life of this fine leader and giving a fuller knowledge of the work being done through Scouting.

Two boys were presented with badges, one for drama, one for stamp collection.

The program closed with the Queen, before which Mr. Haley offered a hearty vote of thanks to leaders, boys and W.A. for an evening of fine entertainment.

Puppets intrigue in lifelike display

The visit of Llorde's International Puppets to Gibsons as an Overture Concerts association event on Wednesday night of last week is something one can look back on for many months to come.

Daniel Llorde who manipulates his puppets through a delightfully entertaining evening announced that the Gibsons performance was the last of his Canadian tour a tour which he makes every seven years.

The "little world of Daniel Llorde" was, to describe it briefly, magic. He, an artist to the very core, enthralled with his delightful presentations.

Lighting, costuming and the various stage effects heightened the quality of performance. The entire production, lighting, sound effects and movement and at times the voice added, were all in the artistry of one man.

Gounod's ballet from Faust was the first presentation and with the puppets manoeuvring to perfection aided by a really excellent tape recording of the Philadelphia orchestra playing the ballet music, one forgot immediate surroundings and watched the puppets develop the Faust theme. Costuming was beautiful and if one imagined, as Mr.
Llorde suggested, one was sitting up in the gods in a theatre from where stage characters would appear small, the illusion was complete.

What tickled some people's fancy was the 18th century drawing room scene with the bewigged, elegantly dressed puppet performing on the piano. The illusion was perfect.

There were quite a few short numbers but the Offenbach Orpheus in Hades overture provided the puppets with a really gorgeous opportunity for the show.

ing off of their capabilities. To say they were almost human is no exaggeration. If puppets could think they thought even as you and I, reacting in the same manner.

Mr. Llorde's artistry goes beyond that of handling puppets as pieces of cloth, wood and wires.
They seem to be alive, more like humans trying to be puppets. It is his mental setting of the stage which goes a long way towards one's enjoyment of the performance. If anyone of the audience failed to be entertained, it was not the fault of the puppets or Mr. Llorde. One could easily spend an afternoon or an evening watching the many facets of Mr. Llorde's delightful way with his puppets. — F.C.

After the performance many who watched the puppets journeyed to Danny's Dining Room for coffee and to meet Mr.
Llorde.

A Visit From St. Nicholas

DR. CLEMENT
CLARK
MOORE

‘Twas the night before Christmas, when all through the house
Not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse;

The stockings were hung by the chimney with care,
In hopes that St. Nicholas soon would be there;
The children were nestled all snug in their beds, While visions of sugar-plums danced in their heads;

And Mamma in her 'kerchief, and I in my cap,
Had just settled our brains for a long winter's nap;

When out on the lawn there arose such a clatter
I sprang from the bed to see what was the matter.

Away to the window I flew like a flash,
Tore open the shutters and threw up the sash.

The moon on the breast of the new-fallen snow,
Gave the lustre of mid-day to objects below,

When, what to my wondering eyes should appear,
But a miniature sleigh, and eight tiny reindeer,

With a little old driver, so lively and quick,
I knew in a moment it must be St. Nick.

More rapid than eagles his coursers they came,
And he whistled, and shouted and called them
by name;

“Now, Dasher! now, Dancer! now Prancer and Vixen!

On, Comet! on Cupid! on Donner and Blitzen!
To the top of the porch! to the top of the wall!
Now dash away! dash away! dash away all!”
As dry leaves that before the wild hurricane fly,
When they meet with an obstacle, mount to the sky;

So up to the house-top the coursers they flew,
With the sleigh full of toys, and St. Nicholas, too.

And then in a twinkling, I heard on the roof,
The prancing and pawing of each little hoof—
As I drew in my head, and was turning around, Down the chimney St. Nicholas came with a bound.

He was dressed all in fur, from his head to his foot,
And his clothes were all tarnished with ashes
and soot;

A bundle of Toys he had flung on his back,
And he looked like a peddler just opening his pack.

His eyes — how they twinkled! his dimples,
how merry!

His cheeks were like roses, his nose like a cherry!
His droll little mouth was drawn up like a bow,
And the beard of his chin was as white as the snow;

The stump of a pipe he held tight in his teeth,
And the smoke it encircled his head like a wreath;

He had a broad face and a little round belly,
That shook when he laughed, like a bowlful of jelly.

He was chubby and plump, a right jolly old elf,
And I laughed when I saw him, in spite of myself,
A wink of his eye and a twist of his head,
Soon gave me to know I had nothing to dread;

He spoke not a word, but went straight to his work,

And filled all the stockings; then turned with a jerk,
And laying his finger aside of his nose,
And giving a nod, up the chimney he rose;

He sprang to his sleigh, to his team gave a whistle,
And away they all flew like the down of a thistle.
But I heard him exclaim, ere he drove out of sight, “Happy Christmas to all, and to all a good night!”

Yes, Virginia

A little girl's curiosity has led to a bit of Christmas philosophy that has since become a Christmas classic.

One day — in December — in 1897, Virginia O'Hanlon wrote a letter to the New York Sun.

"I am eight years old. Some of my little friends say there is no Santa Claus. My papa says, 'If you see it in the SUN, it's so.' Please tell me the truth — is there a Santa Claus?"

Because we believe the reply with its message of keen, spiritual insight deserves reading again and again — we show it here. It was written by Francis E. Church, a writer for the old Sun.

Here it is:

"Yes, indeed!

"Virginia, your little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the scepticism of a sceptical age — they do not believe except what they see — they think nothing can be which is not comprehensible by their little minds."

"All minds, Virginia, whether they be men's or children's are little. In this great universe of ours, man is a mere insect, an ant, in his intellect, as compared with the boundless world about him, as measured by the intelligence capable of grasping the whole of truth and knowledge."

"Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus."

"He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist, and you know that they abound and give to your life its highest beauty and joy. Alas! how dreary would be the world if there were no Santa Claus! It would be as dreary as if there were no Virginias. There would be no childlike faith then, no poetry, no romance to make tolerable this existence. We should have no enjoyment, except in sense and sight. The eternal light with which childhood fills the world would be extinguished."

"Not believe in Santa Claus! You might as well not believe in fairies!"

"You might get your papa to hire men to watch in all the chimneys on Christmas eve to catch Santa Claus, but even if they did not see Santa Claus coming down, what would that prove? Nobody sees Santa Claus — the most real things in the world are those neither children nor men can see."

"Did you ever see fairies dancing on the lawn? Of course not, but that's no proof that they are not there — nobody can conceive or imagine all the wonders that are unseen and unseeable in the world."

"You tear apart the baby's rattle and see what makes the noise inside, but there is a veil covering the unseen world which not the strongest man, or even the united strength of all the strongest men, that ever lived, could tear apart. Only faith, fancy poetry, love, romance, can push aside the curtain and view and picture the supernal beauty and glory beyond."

"Is it all real? — ah, Virginia, in all this world there is nothing else real and abiding."

"No Santa Claus! Thank God! — he lives, and he lives forever — a thousand years from now, Virginia, nay, ten thousand years from now, he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood."

 Francis E. Church ***

Christmas --- around the world

Ask any youngster in any Christian country what his favorite holiday is — the answer — CHRISTMAS!

Although the date may vary, and observances may be a little bit different, in every Christmas celebration, this particular holiday means gifts for the children and extra festivities in the home. In Spain for example, The Three Kings — Gaspar, Melchior and Balthazar — bring the kiddies sweets and treats on the eve of Epiphany.

In preparation for the arrival of the Kings, the children stuff their shoes with straw and leave them outside for the Wise Men. In the morning, the children find that the Wise Men's horses have eaten the straw, and in its stead are gifts of all kinds.

In Italy, youngsters also receive their gifts on Epiphany. However, the bearer is a little woman who is named "La Befana." She carries gifts for the good little children and leaves charcoal for the bad ones.

According to the legend, it is said that when the Wise Men first set out to seek the Christ Child, they asked Le Befana to go with them. She refused because she was too busy. She later decided to go to Bethlehem herself, but got lost along the way. So now as then, "Le Befana" still seeks the Infant Jesus. In Switzerland, the Christ Child Himself delivers gifts to the children. He comes on Christmas Eve in a sleigh drawn by six reindeer. The gifts He carries are toys, nuts, sweets and cakes.

Then, after carols are sung, and the story of the Nativity told by father, the children open their gifts. Later, groups of boys and girls go about singing, yodeling and tinkling cowbells. As they go from house to house, they are given gifts by friendly neighbors.

In many provinces of France, shoes are set by the fireplace by the young children of the family in anticipation of the Christ Child's arrival on Christmas Eve. He fills their shoes with toys and sweets.

In other parts of France and Lorraine, boys and girls hang their stockings by the fireplace on the Eve of St. Nicholas and pray the good Saint will remember them.

St. Nicholas is the giver of gifts for Dutch children, too. They believe that the Saint comes riding through the air on a white horse and jumps from rooftop to rooftop. As he slips down each chimney, he fills shoes and baskets with all sorts of goodies to delight the youngsters.

Children of Sweden get their gifts at Christmas time from the Yulbock or Yule goat, who is supposed to throw their gifts to them through their front doors.

The gifts are always wrapped in plain paper and bear bright red wax seals with a humorous verse attached to it.

In the Latin-American countries, many of the Spanish customs prevail. And they take on added color from North American customs of English and German origin.

In Indian areas, however, Christmas has blended with more primitive customs.

In Germany, St. Nicholas, or Nikolaus brings candies and nuts to the children on December 6, while toys and more personal gifts are distributed to the kiddies on Christmas Eve by the Kristkindl.

In England, children hang their stockings in front of the fireplace on Christmas Eve for Father Christmas to fill, and enjoy almost all of the same joyous customs that the young fry in the United States do.

Since the Christmas holiday is one that is a reverent observance of a Child's birth, then the joy and happiness of children around the world at Christmas-time is the most fitting tribute to Him.

The lantern

A definite rural necessity

By Les Peterson

When Diogenes in classic times set out to seek an honest man, he appropriately provided himself with a lantern.

We of today can not only reminisce on the lantern, but in many outlying districts can contemplate it, for it is still with us.

For the rural pedestrian the lantern is as much a companion in the evening as was his dog during the day. It goes with him to his barn, along roads, across fields, and through woods, warming his hands and watching in all directions. Often it helps make community life possible in places where otherwise families would be forced to stay at home, and in the case of many a trapper and fisherman it is his light not only when he travels but also when he is at home.

Tom Sawyer read his tales of adventure in Aunt Polly's barn by means of a lantern he kept hidden there. Children, and adults too, can still find adventures in the device itself. In scattered communities it is possible to watch a light from miles away. Looking from the window, one can muse, "There comes a light! I wonder who it is, and will he come in at the gate or go on by?"

Usually, in the winter, life is lonely and evenings long, and the watcher hopes that the light will turn in. Perhaps it does, in which case the conjectured visitor is met at the porch. At his gesture to turn the light low, the host insists that he blow it out entirely. Whatever the pretext given, the true reason is a desire for company, for an opportunity to sit and give release to thoughts that have had to bide their time all day. More than likely, pretext or no pretext, the visitor has called for the same reason.

All through the visit the lantern awaits without, ready to go again when coffee cups have been set down and the conversation has come to an end.

For it is always a friend who calls with a lantern. One cannot be furtive with a lighted lantern in his hand, nor is it at all probable that anyone carrying one is bent on nefarious pursuits.

If the lantern is friendly during the winter ashore, it is at its romantic best during the rest on a summer night, jeweled summer on the water. No one can watch a harbor full of boats elled with these quiet lights, without feeling strange thoughts pull and play about his heart. For these are the boats, and from their masts, threading across the dark waters, come the soft golden paths of the lantern.

The eruption on Tristan da Cunha

By A. J. C.

Through the weeks of autumn, copies of the Illustrated London News that reached me via Toronto carried interesting photographs of Tristan da Cunha and the inhabitants who were forced to leave their homes and seek refuge on the small neighbor-island of Nightingale by the most unexpected eruption of a volcano regarded as extinct since its discovery by Portuguese seamen hundreds of years ago.

To me those illustrations were also nostalgic; it was in 1903 that the tall Cape Homer on which I was serving sailed past Tristan within easy distance. Seen fairly often from the decks of sailing ships it is seldom sighted today, being far from the steamship routes — and the windjammers are gone from the seas. Few landmen will have seen that loneliest station of human life in all the world.

Master mariners of my time at sea differed in the matter of paying a call at such places when the chance of a voyage took them near; most of them stood on about their business of taking a ship to the port for which she was bound, but the odd one like Dixon of the old Elginshire would have backed his mainyard off Tristan — supposing the weather favorable — and taken a boat ashore, both for the interest of the visit to himself and the islanders and the chance that people living so isolated might be in need of something the ship could supply — medical requirements for instance — and the Admiralty appreciated a recent report on such places. But my ship sailed on and the opportunity was lost.

We had done better at the Falkland Islands where we called on business and were thus able to leave our tracks ashore in a place new to us. Such little events meant much when all the world was young and every goose a swan.

The main elevation of Tristan da Cunha is plainly of ancient volcanic origin but as we saw it the thought of a possible eruption would not have occurred to anyone, the danger would have seemed as remote as it does to us of Gibsons when we look northward toward Garibaldi. But, somewhere in that silent mass the fires of the earth were still alive and they forced a way through at last.

Men of the H.M.S. Leopard, sent to salvage what they could of the islanders' goods reported that the growing mound about the new vent glows with incandescence at night.

One wonders how many other supposedly extinct volcanoes are merely napping for a thousand years or so. Two have let go within living memory, one near the main port of Honduras on the Pacific coast that heaved its head offshore to form a new island and Mont Pelee on Martinique that suddenly destroyed the town and port of that island. Most of the survivors that escaped — and they were few — had taken to the water, preferring the risk of drowning to death by burning.

They were picked up by the British ship Roddam which had been lying at anchor some way out. Her master took his ship in under a rain of fire with every available hose playing over her upper works.

I should remember that good skipper; he was given a position as examiner of Masters and Mates for the British Board of Trade in recognition of his action at Martinique and it was before him that I sweated through an exam on the instruments of navigation. When he had done with me he pronounced the remains "competent!"

The refugees from Tristan are now in England — a few over 300 in number. Sympathy with those who have lost not only their homes but their way of living also has opened the hearts and the purses of those who are islanders themselves — on a rather larger scale, and the dispossessed will be set up in an environment suitable to them. It is a wise Old England in such matters.

Busy bees in Junior Red Cross

(By SHEILA NELSON)

The Junior Red Cross at Elphinstone High School is an active body, whose council of members elected from each division meets once a week with Larry Crawford as president and Sue Forbes as secretary-treasurer. This year the club is carrying on with projects begun in the past and plans to extend its support to new projects.

The Nabob coupon drive which started about three years ago, ended early this year with the accumulation of enough coupons to acquire a coffee maker even larger than expected. With this new coffee maker the J.R.C. will be able to carry on with the sale of coffee during intermissions of public functions.

Last year Elphinstone had the honor of being the first school in B.C. to adopt a Greek school and to send along a box of supplies and later the same year became the first school to adopt a second Greek school.

This year the project is being continued and funds are being raised. Through the assistance of the Industrial Arts shop which will make the required packing box, $10 will be saved.

Funds are being raised in various ways such as bake sales and mixers during the school year. Last week a full-scale concert was presented by the Junior Red Cross and supported wholeheartedly by almost the entire student body. The program consisted of two skits by the Drama Club directed by Mr. Cooper; selections by a girls choral group organized by Patty Smith and accompanied by Lyn Vernon; accordion solos by Sharon Maylea and Carol Mylroie who was assisted by Bobby Maclean with a dance routine; a piano solo by Lyn Vernon; lively numbers by the "Combo" and a series of tumbling routines to the accompaniment of the drums ably handled by Peter Rudolph; a solo by Sue Forbes. A total of $35.54 was made which will go towards the adoption of a Greek school.

The current fund raising project is one which has become an annual event. Girls of various home economics classes bake Christmas cakes, puddings, cookies and candy which they package and donate to the Junior Red Cross. You will no doubt be approached by eager salesmen asking you to assist the Junior

Red Cross in their work by buying their tickets. The club has had excellent support in the past and expects the same this year. The draw for the many boxes will take place at a closing assembly on Dec. 22.

Other projects of the Junior Red Cross are to support UNICEF to whom we have sent a donation of $10. The Sudan project, which we hope to be working on in the near future, is a project where we raise money to buy seeds so the children can grow vegetables in Sudan.

We thank the students from Roberts Creek Elementary school who have taken an active interest in the work of the Junior Red Cross and have given a donation of $5 to help us adopt a Greek school. We hope you will continue your good work.

Now that all the signs of Christmas are in the air, we miss you, neighbor, for Christmas is a time for remembering.

Your little house across the bay looks lonely and forlorn. The tame coons prowl the place no more and the gulls no longer sit upon the fence posts waiting for handouts. They miss you too. You lived your life as you wished to do. From your windows you could watch the boats sailing out on the tide and the cars whizzing by on the highway. You had no wish to follow either, for yours was never the soul of an adventurer. All that you held dear you found in your own little corner.

Although the flowers upon your grave are withered now, the branches of the tree under whose shade you lie are still as green as our memories of you.

We miss you, neighbor. — J.W.

It was agreed that the next donation should be the purchase of a Sitz bath, a portable instrument sterilizer and $200 worth of instruments which are all urgently needed.

Little Eleanor Swan and Karen and Vickie Fearnley picked the winning tickets for the raffle. Mrs. McNab of West Sechelt won the doll; Mrs. J. Korgan of Sechelt, the tray and J. Jorgenson of Gibsons, the plaque.

Toy chest-desk

There comes a time when a youngster decides he needs his own desk.

For your boy or girl, the time could be this Christmas, and at little more cost to you than an evening's woodworking. The desk shown here has a hidden mother-saver. When not in use, the top slides over to cover a large-sized box for toys and what might have been a remarkable desk-top clutter.

This make-it-yourself item can be quickly made from fir plywood. Hammer, saw and screwdriver are the only tools needed for the job.

Only 18"x21"x24" when closed, the toy box can be stored away in a corner or under a table or desk when not in use.

Corners of the slide-out table are reinforced with metal angle brackets. These should be set into the plywood or the end of the box can be cut away to receive them when the unit is closed. Note that the end of the box is recessed 3/4" so that the table support slides in flush when the box is shut.

The 1/2"x1 1/2" inch strip screwed to the table end acts as a grip for opening the unit and completes the frame when the box is closed. In addition to the fir plywood 78" of 1/2"x1 1/2" lumber for the frame and 70 inches of 1"x1" lumber for the stop and table top runners are needed.

The runners are set 1/4" more than the thickness of the top below the framing strip of the box. These runners can be waxed so that the top slides easily.

To finish the unit, regular undercoat and high gloss enamel will provide a surface that is easy to keep clean with a damp cloth.

TIPS FOR SMOKERS

Keep plenty of noncombustible ashtrays about your home during the holidays and empty them often, the Canadian Underwriters' Association recommends. One out of every four fires is caused by matches and smoking. If you are having house guests, make sure that upstairs bedrooms, as well as the living room, dining room and kitchen are well stocked with ashtrays. When you empty an ashtray, make sure no fire is in it.

Bald eagles are so named because of the effect of the white feathers on their heads.

Keep fire away from Christmas

Trees, decorations, and special Christmas costumes should all be chosen with special care and protected from fire. The All Canada Insurance Federation, which represents more than 220 Canadian fire, automobile and casualty insurance companies, makes these recommendations for safety in the home during the Christmas season:

Choose a small Christmas tree; it will be less hazardous than a larger one.

Keep the base of the tree in a container of water; the water will be absorbed and keep the tree moist.

Keep trees away from stoves, heaters and fireplaces.

Use good quality electric lights on the tree, not candles.

Check your lights for any defects which might cause short circuits.

Be sure that Christmas lights do not overload the electrical circuits in your home.

Do not use paper, gauze-like materials or other highly inflammable cloths for children's costumes.

Check carefully for burning cigarette butts after each party or gathering in your home.

MORE THAN 50 prize winning dolls from the Pacific National Exhibition will go to the Children's Hospital, and the Province Stocking Fund. The dolls are from all over the Pacific Northwest and were entered in the doll dressing contest, sponsored by T. Eaton Company Limited, at the 1961 fair. The contest has been running for several years in the Home Arts Show. Here, preparing them for shipment for Christmas are, Mrs. H. H. Steen, director of Home Arts, and Mr. Thomas R. Fyfe, P.N.E. president.

Ratepayers elect officers

At the annual meeting of Sechelt Rural-Wilson Creek Ratepayers Association, the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. R. L. Jackson, Wilson Creek; vice-president, Mr. L. Chamberlin, Wilson Creek; secretary, Mrs. M. L. Lonneberg, R.R. 1, Sechelt; treasurer, Mr. Charles Stewart, Selma Park; directors, Mrs. W. Parsons, R.R. 1, Sechelt and Mrs. R. Donely, R.R. 1, Sechelt. Membership chairman is Mr. A. DeAngelis, Selma Park.

The following report of yearly activities was given by the president:

The Sechelt Rural - Wilson

Creek Ratepayers were interested in the following problems of the community:

Prepared and presented a brief to the Public Utilities Commission on the raise in water rates. This brief was well received.

Requested sidewalks for the school children who must walk to and from school on this dangerous highway. The shoulder of the road was gravelled.

Attempted to create better liaison among the various districts in the area, by bringing them together for discussion of common problems and ideas, and thereby promote the progress of the entire area, and eliminate partisanship.

Based on the Chant Royal Commission report, prepared a brief for Sechelt School District No. 46, outlining recommendations ratepayers felt would be advantageous to this area.

Established formation of a Greater Water district for Sechelt Peninsula. Although the formation of this board was slightly premature, much valuable information was obtained and groundwork laid for the future, when this area is more densely populated.

Have urged both federal and provincial governments to look into the possibilities of establishing a Junior Vocational School at Sechelt.

Requested the department of transport to have the Black Ball Ferries put on more and faster ferries, especially during the summer when ferry traffic is heavy and residents and tourists are subject to waiting and loss of time.

Had Field road to the Airport posted at 30 m.p.h.

Submission made to the attorney-general supporting the Bar Association in their request for more adequate and uniform salaries, more adequate court room facilities and stenographic assistance, for stipendiary magistrates.

Presented a brief to the Royal Commission on Expropriation of land and property, asking to have a regular arbitration board established.

Lawrence Jackson of Sechelt was fined $10 for being intoxicated on an Indian Reserve.

Leonard Stanley Reid of Madeira Park paid a $20 fine for passing another car on the solid double line.

Robert Randell of Roberts Creek was fined $15 for driving a car with faulty emergency brakes.

James Donald Wise of Half-moon Bay was fined $50 for driving at speeds in excess of 70 miles per hour in a 50 mile zone. Constable J. Weiland of the R.C.M.P. Highway Patrol said the road was slippery from rain and that a pursuit of several miles took place before he could apprehend Wise.

John A. G. McLean of Roberts Creek was fined $25 for being intoxicated in a public place.

Gordon Norman Klein of Half-moon Bay was acquitted on a charge of driving without due care and attention when his car landed on its side in a ditch on Gower Point Road. It was found by the court that Klein had swerved his car to avoid hitting a child that had wandered into the path of the car.

Kenneth Henry Smith of Burnaby and John Clifford Coleridge of Saltery Bay were fined $20 each for passing cars on the double solid line.

Gerry McDonald of Wilson Creek was fined $25 for operating a motor vehicle with an expired drivers license.

Sixteen speeders were fined a total of $400.

Fir plywood Christmas Trees

CUT FROM 1/2" WATERPROOF GLUE FIR PLYWOOD PANEL 4'x4'

Hi folks! Need a few trees around the homestead for Christmas? No time to grow some? Want evergreens?—Reds? Blues? Here is a charmingly simple design for a tree you make yourself, full grown to whatever size you favor in this type of tree. Paint it whatever color you wish. It's decorative outside or in, unlike a lot of the trees you get these days.

Originally designed to produce medium sized four-foot trees, the basic dimensions can be scaled either up or down to produce tiny centrepieces for the Yuletide table or mammoth outdoor displays.

Be sure to use fir plywood for the trees. This plywood is made with a completely waterproof glue which will stand up to any sort of weather.

Draw the pattern for the tree—each tree is made of two pieces that dovetail together—directly onto the fir plywood and cut it out with hand or power tools.

A wide variety of finishes can be given the trees. Small models can be gilded for table use, larger ones painted green or white and decorated with sequins or glitter.

Christmas lights hang easily over the "branches" of these fir plywood trees—and there's no danger of fire from tinder-dry needles.

If the tree is destined for use outdoors where wind might raise a problem, it can be attached firmly to a stake driven in the ground, or nailed to a heavier wooden footing.

When the Christmas season is over, there's no problem of storage. These trees come apart easily—store flat until next year.

Older motorists need more light

Older motorists require much more light to see an object, says the B.C. Automobile Association, in pinpointing a special problem of night driving.

A driver 33 years old needs about twice the amount of light to see a dimly-lit object as does a person aged 20. At age 46, the amount of light needed is about twice that at age 33. And so on.

These estimates are in a report "Visibility for Night Driving," prepared by the AAA traffic engineering and safety department in Washington, D.C.

The report urges older citizens to drive more slowly at night and emphasizes that ability to recover from glare, approaching headlights at night, diminishes sharply with advancing age. It points out that few eye examinations, however, test this aspect of vision.

The AAA report says that lack of an adequate supply of oxygen in the lungs also decreases the sensitivity of the eye.

There are Scandinavian, French and ancient Egyptian legends which claim to have given the Christmas tree to the world. The first authentic mention of a Christmas tree is of one in Strasbourg, Germany, 1605

Commercial confusion

(By MADGE NEWMAN)

Hypo (hypothetical woman) looked forward to an evening when she could curl up on the chesterfield with her knitting and enjoy TV. But she always fell asleep, waking only for the commercials. While the commercials filled her evenings with excitement, they caused her days to be fraught with confusion.

In the morning she did not wake up to an orange drink. She woke grabbing the alarm clock. She did not waken refreshed because she had taken a chocolate-coated pill or one of those things guaranteed to make sleep easy. She had not been sleeping on a cloud.

Stumbling into the bathroom she was faced with her first big problem of the day — which toothpaste? The one which eliminated the need of a mouth wash or the one with the cool, minty taste? Since she was a busy person perhaps she should stick to the one that lasted all day.

Breakfast was another headache. Her kitchen did not resemble remotely those on the TV commercials which, at all hours, day or night, were immaculate, and all signs of kitchen work or utensils entirely missing. The mothers, no matter what the hour, had always just returned from the hairdressers and were attired in garments suitable for afternoon bridge parties. Hypo was scarcely even attired.

Her kitchen was a mess. The spaniel had just brought in half the driveway on his feet plus ferns and bits and pieces on his long hair, which, together with blood from a cut paw, now ornamented the floor. The boys' homework cluttered the table along with Hypo's manuscripts from yesterday's efforts, a deck of cards, a coffee cup and the usual reading material.

She swept the stuff off the table and placed an assortment of packages in the middle. The youngsters could take their choice. One would want the breakfast of champions, another the one that was just a little bit better. Or for a change one might prefer to let a happy greeting start him on his day. One boy was almost sure to want the one that was ready to eat, toasted through and through, because he knew it was tasty too.

She didn't use the seventy cent spread because she didn't have seventy cents. She used the enriched kind, untouched by human hands. Nor did she have any of the bread that makes children grow, grow, grow. She baked her own and the kids ate, ate, ate. Of course she made sure that the flour she used had vitamins added.

She couldn't decide which was the best drink for the family so she gave them a variety. There was the kind they woke up to, plus the one that was rich and chocolaty and double flavored. The milk that mother put it into for more food and energy was also enriched with vitamins, and homogenized as well. Not only that, it came from contented cows.

She didn't know what to do about her own coffee. She had tried shaking the can and was satisfied there were more measures than any other all right, but on the other hand, she knew she should use the kind that was made of aged coffee beans, deep dark, delicious, aged like wine. Or, hold on a minute, what about coffee nerves? Why not drink all the coffee she wanted and still be steady as a rock? In the end she settled for the jar with the star on top, feeling a little guilty about neglecting the millions of tiny flavor buds.

The cat was fed next. He knew what was best for him — liver and meat, a vitamin treat, full of vigor and vim. But the dog! He watched the commercials too and Hypo had a dreadful time trying to satisfy him. He seemed to prefer the tail waggin' taste for beef lovin' dogs to the kind that didn't improve his table manners.

With the children off to school, Hypo longed to sit down and relax with a cup of coffee and a cigaret but she had had to give up smoking. Instead she drank a cup of daring tea. At one time she had been quite satisfied with firm, round, fully-packed cigarettes that were sold American until she had been cautioned to switch to a filter blend. Next she was persuaded to try a superior filter, a recessed one! But it hadn't tasted like a cigarette should, even though it had something that counted up front.

She had become pretty discouraged until she learned about the ring that means the real thing, but that wasn't until after she had tried high porosity paper and found that it wasn't cool to her throat after all. So when, one night, the talk was about vacuumed tobacco, she gave up.

Time now to start the dishes and say "hello" to pretty hands. On the one hand she knew by the name that it was gentle to hands, and on the other hand she would love to have hands just like her daughter's — if she had a daughter. Of course it was pretty simple to let a liquid detergent, which just had to have the top of its new type bottle snipped off, wash all the grease away. She ended by rinsing the dishes under running hot water and leaving them to dry in the rack.

Next Hypo went to the laundry to start the washing. And what a problem that was! The many gay packages of soap and detergent stood side by side on the shelf, each a superior product designed to give the most satisfaction. There was blue, and green crystals. There was pink, and whiter than white. There were at least six that were recommended by all dealers and manufacturers of washing machines. There was snow, and one that was softer than rain water. Which to choose? She finally poured some of each into the machine, and, because it did not have the new bleach disposal unit, added a generous amount of extra cleaning power.

While the washing was sloshing she washed the kitchen windows. Pre-occupied with a headache just beginning and jumpy nerves well advanced, she took the wrong container from the medley of cleaning materials and, before she realized what she was doing, had starched the windows. It was easy to do. Easy to get off too she remembered. One of the cleaning compounds got rid of grease and grime in just a minute — with a little help.

Her head! She could feel a hammer pounding in there. Electric arcs burned and exploded, springs sprang back and forth. She made her way to the medicine cabinet and groped among the bottles and boxes and came up with a pill that stopped the unusual activity in her head and didn't upset her stomach.

Ominous sounds from the laundry sent her scurrying there only to find the washing machine completely clogged, silenced, perhaps forever.

Wearily Hypo reached for her bib overalls and the tool kit. Should she have used Brand X?

A GRACIOUS GIFT

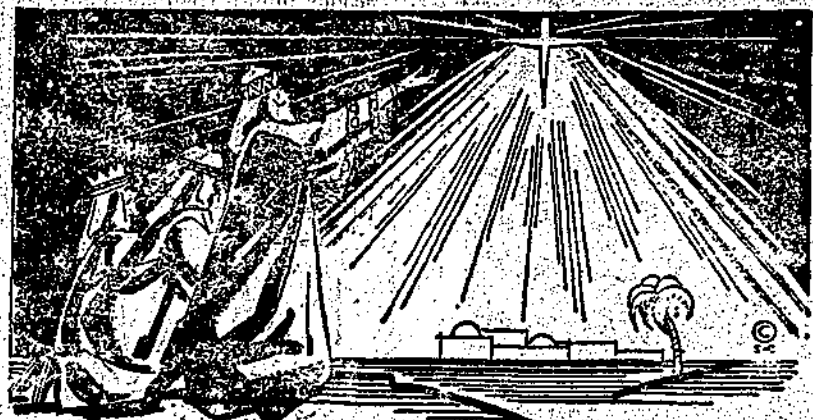

How many times has a visitor in your garden stood enraptured by one of your beautiful rose bushes in colorful bloom? Or, how often have you found yourself encouraging someone to grow roses so they can share the same joy and pleasure you do? With these thoughts in mind — and your Christmas shopping list in hand — you'll probably realize that a Christmas rose plant makes a gracious gift for either a veteran or a freshman gardener.

LIFE'S COMPANION

The ancestor of all domestic pigeons, of which there are about 200 varieties, was a wild species, the Rock Dove, whose native habitat is the sea cliffs and rocky places of the European continent. Pigeons are the only monogamous domesticated birds. They mate for life.

Joseph to have Merry Yuletide

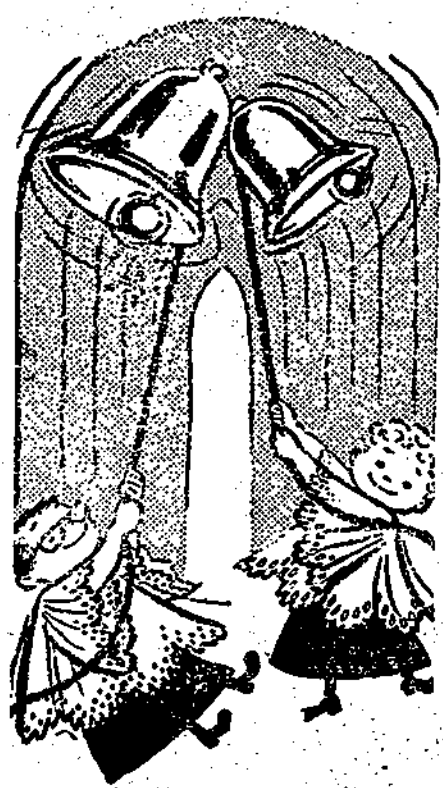

Joseph Feke, long time Canadian Pacific Railway employee, and section foreman at Canal Flats, British Columbia, is assured of a Merry Christmas this year.

Thirty-two years ago he emigrated to Canada, leaving his wife of one year behind until he was settled, and two months after his departure a son Joseph jr. was born.

On arrival in Canada Joseph sr. found immediate work with the Canadian Pacific and sent word for Mrs. Feke and Joseph to join him. Thirty-two years later his wife Zofi has joined him. Two world wars and sickness had delayed her.

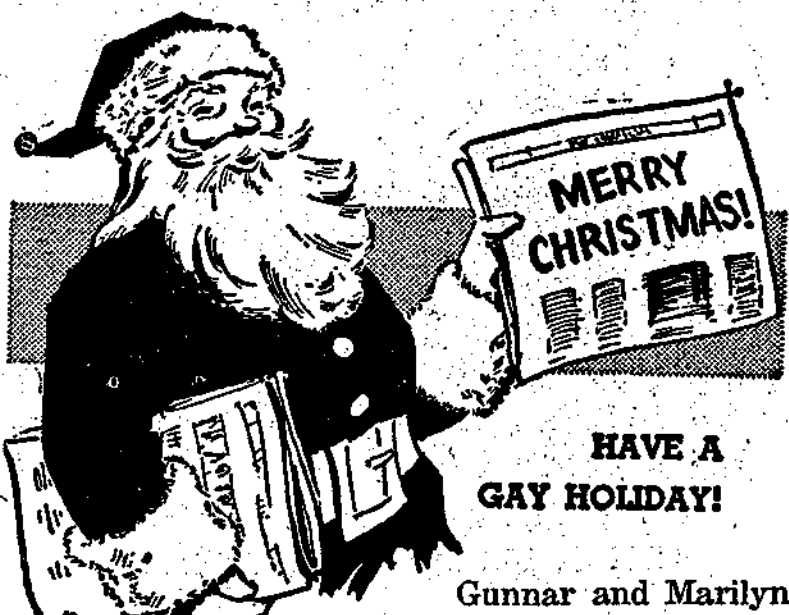

In the meantime, in 1948, Joseph jr. arrived in Canada and also found work with the Canadian Pacific Railway. He has married since arriving and has three children and is presently CPR section foreman at Revelstoke.

SMALL TALK

By Syms

"He's got the whole track team wearing silk..."

"He needs the runners."

Stars shining through fir tree first Christmas lights

The story is that Martin Luther created the first lighted Christmas tree — our most cherished symbol of the Yule season next to Santa Claus.

Looking out of a window on Christmas Eve in a castle where he was a guest, he saw the stars shining brightly through the boughs of a giant fir tree. One very bright star stood in the firmament at the top of the tree. So Luther chopped down a small fir in a forest near the castle and brought it inside. He secured candles which he put on the tree with the largest one at the top — the Star of Bethlehem. The prince and his princess were delighted and they placed all their gifts for their children under the tree. And when the children saw it in the morning, they were ecstatic with joy. And that is how our lighted Christmas tree originated.

Today, Christmas lighting is part of our Canadian way of life and we have a huge variety of lighted decorations from which to choose.

The modern trend for Christmas tree lighting is away from the bright and somewhat garish effect when brilliant, clear bulbs are used. The tendency now is to use subdued "cool" colors in the larger bulbs.

Recently introduced are the "midget" type lamps and these have become enormously popular across Canada. These are about the size and shape of the sharpened end of a lead pencil, come in a full color range and give a beautiful effect on the tree.

More and more homeowners are using the new artificial trees. These are most realistic looking. They make no muss of needles and can be folded up and stored for use year after year. Besides coming in the natural green they are available in a number of pastel shades. They are made from visca which is fireproof — an added advantage.

And for the safety of your home and family be sure that your Christmas tree lights are equipped with a safety fuse plug. These strings have outlets at the free end into which other strings may be plugged and the safety fuse also protects these.

MERRY CHRISTMAS to EVERYONE
We hope your holiday is grand.

BOWLING

By Bert Garside and Jim Hoult
Chief Bowling Instructors.
Double Diamond Advisory Council

ROLLING A STRAIGHT BALL

It would seem that bowling a "straight" ball right down the centre of the bowling lane would be both the best, and easiest way to score strikes.

It is neither best, nor easy. In fact, bowling a perfectly straight ball is practically impossible.

Hundreds of bowlers will claim their ball rolls perfectly straight — they can see it with their own eyes. One reason for this is that they are watching their ball from a point too close to the floor. Watch someone roll that "straight" ball — but stand up, and step back so you get a good view of the lane. You'll find that invariably the ball hasn't travelled in a perfectly straight line, but has curved slightly one way or the other.

There are two reasons a ball will curve:

The ball always has some twist on it when it is released from your hand. No matter how hard you try, all your fingers simply can't release at precisely the same split second.

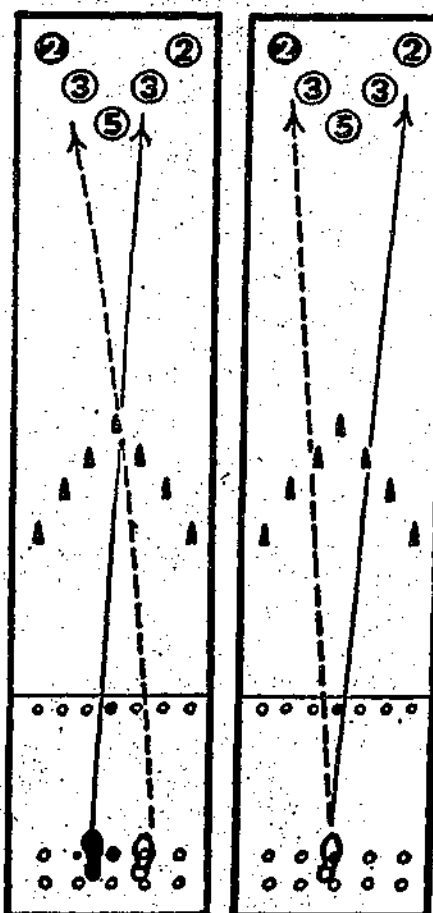

The floor of the lane will "work" the ball slightly one way or the other. No matter how well it is engineered, no lane is perfectly uniform in texture.

Even if it could be thrown perfectly straight, this would be the least effective ball in taking down pins. A nearly straight ball tends to "pick out" pins, with no mixing action. A curving ball has "spin" on it that is transferred to the pins. A spinning ball picks up the pin it hits, twists it, and flings it into the remaining pins, so that more corner pins are knocked down.

However, if you are unfortunate enough to roll a nearly "straight" ball as your natural delivery, and don't wish to experiment with some more effective types of delivery, here's how you would line yourself up for spot bowling.

TWO WAYS OF AIMING

There are two methods of aiming — by switching your "front

The rear sight method The front sight method sight" or by switching your "rear sight."

Rear Sight Method — In this method you always roll your ball over the centre dart. When shooting for the headpin, line up your right foot over the centre spot, and roll your ball over the centre dart.

When shooting for the left corner pin, line up your foot over the first dot to the right of centre, then roll over the centre dart. For right corner pins, stand over the first dot to the left of centre. To hit the 3-pins on the right or left side, just move over half as far as for the corner pins.

Front Sight Method — In this method you always keep your right foot positioned over the centre dot.

When shooting for the headpin, roll the ball over the centre dart. Aiming for the right corner pin, roll your ball over the first dart to the right. For the left corner pin, roll your ball over the first dart to the left of centre. For the 3-pins, roll your ball between the darts.

Naturally, you'll use common sense to adjust these aiming points a trifle if you find yourself consistently missing in the same manner each time. But, don't be too hasty about adjusting your aiming point. It is far more likely a miss was due to you not delivering the ball in exactly the same way each time. Adjust these aiming points only if you find your ball is consistently off target the same amount in one direction.

Next: THE CURVE BALL.

Legend has it that before the Crucifixion the berries of Christmas Holly were white instead of red as now.

The author of the favorite children's Christmas poem "Twas the night before Christmas," an eminent New York divinity professor, felt his creation was below his dignity and would not admit he wrote it for 20 years.

High fliers

Probably no bird holds a warmer place in the sentimental heart of the nation than the Canada goose, though many of us may be aware of him only in the spring and fall days of the great migrations. Now is the time when eyes are drawn to the narrow space between our rooftops by a far-off, urgent honking and we look up from pavement and garden plot to see a gaggle of geese fleeing southward in a ragged skein against the autumn sky.

In view of the high regard in which this feathered lord of the northlands is held, it should come as no surprise to learn that he is reputed to be the only migratory bird capable of surmounting the 26,000-foot barrier of the Himalayas. No other is known to cross this towering range during migration.

CHRISTMAS GAMES FOR YOUR PARTY

Have you been searching for games for your family gathering or for a children's party this vacation? Here are some new games and some Christmas variations of old favorites which may appeal to you. They can be altered and adapted to the taste and age of the guests.

Acting is always fun and here is a triple action pantomime charade. Divide the guests into four groups. Let each group choose a leader and draw a slip from a hat. On the four slips a different suggestion for a silent presentation of a Christmas activity, which naturally falls into three divisions, has been written. Here are four good ones: Bringing in the tree, putting it up, trimming it; packing Christmas boxes, wrapping and addressing them; hanging Christmas stockings, then one person fills them and eats the refreshments; carollers walk along a path, stop and sing a carol, then wave their farewell. The group in the audience which first guesses what the action represents receives five points for each member of the group.

Print the name of one well known Christmas symbol such as a star, a candle, a stocking, a sprig of holly, one of mistletoe, a poinsettia flower, a bell, each on a separate sheet of cardboard. Then you will have a set of sheets, each with a different symbol. Have the guests choose a panel of three. These sit at the front facing the audience. They cannot see the name of the symbol when one cardboard sheet is held up, facing the players. By asking questions the panel try to find it out as quickly as possible.

The leader must answer only "Yes" or "No" to the questions put to him in turn by the panel members. If they cannot guess it in two minutes, each member of the audience gains a point. The panel member who finds out what it is first, gains five points. The last game is best for older boys and girls or for adults, but the old-time parlor games, slightly changed to give them a Christmas flavor, are great fun for children. Instead of "I Packed my Trunk," substitute "I Would Like to Find in my Stocking." Each member in turn adds one article, after reciting in the right order those already mentioned. If he makes a slip or cannot remember, he must drop out. The player staying in the game longest wins with ten points.

In Coffee-Pot, a story is told by the group, each player adding one sentence. One person goes out of the room and the rest, seated in a circle, choose one Christmas symbol, say "a star." When the player in the hall returns to the group he listens carefully. Each player must refer to the star in his sentence, but instead of saying star he says coffee-pot. The player who gives the secret word away, so that it is guessed, becomes the next player to go out of the room. When he comes back he tries to guess the new "coffee-pot."

Pre-school children would find this too difficult, but they would enjoy "Hide the Christmas Tree Light" played in the same way as "Hide the Thimble." End up with Musical Chairs in which young and old can participate, or guessing the name of different Christmas songs played on the piano is another good way to conclude the games session.

OCTOGENARIAN HELPS
Henry Haker, octogenarian resident of Kelowna, typifies thousands of Canadians who are answering the challenge of the Canadian Bible Society to raise $100,000 to send a million copies of John's Gospel in Tamil to South India. Mr. Haker, recently in hospital, sent $1,000 of his savings to help spread the Gospel through the printed word.

MORALE BOOSTER
Color is an inexpensive morale-booster. With about $10 worth of paint and a desk, a wishy-washy bedroom can be transformed into a lively study room.

TIME CUT DOWN
Treatment for tuberculosis in Canada has been reduced from an average of 18 months to 8 months during the past 5 years. It is for this reason that so many sanatoria beds have been taken out of active use, and it is also the same fact that has made possible the closing of Tranquille and Jericho Beach sanatoria in B.C.

'Dead' man lives to retire

North Shore District plant supervisor, Reginald H. Milner, who "died" from wounds in France during World War I, has retired after serving the British Columbia Telephone Company for nearly 49 years. His replacement will be H. S. (Stuart) Telford, former Nanaimo district plant manager.

Like Mark Twain once wrote of himself, the report in hometown papers of Sgt. Milner's demise in the 1917 Battle of the Somme was greatly exaggerated. A splinter of metal from an exploding shell only ended his stay in the front line trenches.

After the war, Mr. Milner resumed his telephone career as a switchboard apprentice. In 1924, Mr. Milner married the former Ivy Popplewell, who was then employed by the company as an operator in the Fairmont exchange.

Jack Milner, their oldest son, is an installer at the Yukon exchange in North Vancouver, while Peter Milner is a PBX installer in the Mutual exchange in downtown Vancouver. Shirley Milner, now married and residing in Everett, Wash., was an operator at the former North exchange in North Vancouver. The Milners have another daughter, Nicki, who attends high school in Ladner, and eight grandchildren.

SEE YOUR DRUGGIST

Every week one person in Canada dies accidentally by swallowing poison at home. Most are children of 4 years and under. A public service, sponsored by the B.C. Pharmaceutical Association, in conjunction with the Canadian Pharmaceutical Association, is dedicated to saving lives. Slide films on the problem of accidental poisoning in the home are available in British Columbia communities through arrangement with local pharmacists.

INSURANCE PAID

In British Columbia $12.5 million was paid out in death benefits by life insurance companies during the first nine months of 1961, the Canadian Life Insurance Officers association reports. The total for the corresponding period in 1960 was $11.3 million. On 2,540 ordinary policies, payments this year were $8,104,500; on 850 industrial policies $236,000; and on 1,540 group certificates $4,158,000.

TAME TERRORS

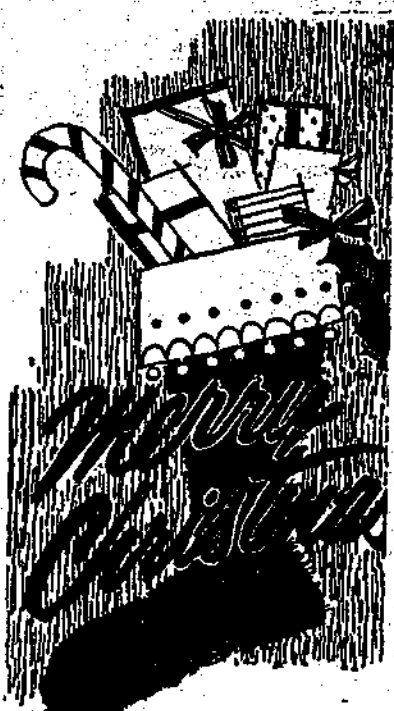

According to Bill Ward, editor of Wildlife Review, domestic dogs and cats cause more trouble than all wild creatures put together if reports of B.C. Conservation officers are any criterion.

Most of the deer killing complaints, he reports, can be traced to domestic dogs (not coyotes) while cats and dogs are usually found responsible for a the killings of farm fowl reported to the Fish and Game Branch

BCE change-over for New Year's Eve

At midnight New Year's Eve, B.C. Electric will turn over their southern Vancouver Island service area to B.C. Hydro and take over service responsibility in wide areas of central and northern British Columbia.

Negotiations will continue well into the year as details of staff, customer service, plant operation and cash adjustments are worked out by representatives handling the re-alignment.

B.C. Hydro will have service authority over all of Vancouver Island, Kamloops, Vernon and part of the East Kootenay area. B.C. Electric's service area will be extended from 1240 square miles to over 275,000 square miles and will include the huge, largely uninhabited northland, above the 54th Parallel which cuts across the province just north of Prince George. South of the 54th Parallel, BCE service area will extend to the 121st Meridian west to the coast including Prince Rupert and Bella Coola.

About 560 BCE employees in Victoria will join the Hydro which will also gain 57,000 customers and the 27,900 kilowatt Jordan River hydro-generating station on Lower Vancouver Island. BCE will acquire 225 Hydro staff members and some 24,500 customers in the Cariboo and northern points including Prince 16 Coast News, Dec. 21, 1961.

George. BCE will also take over 76,000 kilowatts generating capacity at 15 diesel powered stations scattered from Williams Lake to Fort Nelson.

If you park for more than a minute or two with the motor running, open a window several inches. Wide open is safer.
